THE LAW.

Extract from the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

"Sec. 1.—Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal. * * * * *

"Sec. 2.—Every person who shall monopolize, or attempt to monopolize or combine, or conspire with another person or persons to monopolize, any part of the trade or commerce among the several States or with foreign nations shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. * * * * *

"Sec. 4.—The several Circuit Courts of the United States are hereby invested with jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of this act, and it shall be the duty of he several District Attorneys of the United States, in their respective districts, under the direction of the Attorney-General, to institute proceedings in equity to restrain and prevent such violations.

Justice Harlan's Decision in the Northern Securities Case

"* * * That every combination or conspiracy which would extinguish competition between otherwise competing railroads engaged in interstate trade or commerce, and which would in that way restrain such trade or commerce, is made illegal by the act.

"That the natural effect of competition is to increase commerce, and an agreement whose direct effect is to prevent this play of competition restrains instead of promoting trade and commerce."

VIOLATION OF THE LAW

From President Mellen's letter to Governor Guild:

Mellen—Interests identified with my company have acquired a large stock interest in the Boston & Maine Railroad. * * * * *

From President Mellen'stestimony before the Legislature:

Mellen—What has been done would not have been done but for the corporation. The way it has been done is immaterial. The corporation stands here before this committee to all intents and purposes as if it had done it self. We don't dodge one bit. We bought it because we must buy it or lose it, and had we not bought them we could never have bought. * * * * * The interests that I refer to I should say approximately to-day have one hundred thousand shares.

Q. "And you have not the controlling interest in the Boston & Maine in the way of stocks?"

A. "Not in the sense that it is more than half, but substantially, for all intents and pruposes, FOR THE VOTING POWER, I SHOULD ASSUME THAT ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND SHARES WAS THE PRACTICVAL CONTROL."

STOP THE MERGER

Evidence That Mellen Has Violated the Anti-Trust Law Laid Before United States District Attorney French.

The Independence League has taken the first step in a movement to stop the illegal formation of a railroad monopoly in Massachusetts and to punish the New Haven road for its violation of the anti-trust laws.

It has laid before U. S. District Attorney French clear evidence of the violation of the law by the New Haven Railroad, and has called upon Mr. French to break up the unlawful conspiracy against trade entered into by President Mellen and "his directors," as he calls them.

Following is the text of the information filed to-day with the United States District Attorney:

August 21, 1907.

Hon. Asa P. French,
U. S. District Attorney,
Federal Bldg., Boston.

In behalf of the Executive Committee of the Independence League of Massachusetts, I submit to you the following facts, which our committee believes to be a violation of the Federal laws, and a knowledge of which we believe will place upon you the duty of invoking your powers as United States Attorney for the District of Massachusetts to enforce the law and preserve the great interests of the community in which you are a respected citizen and an important public conservator.

On the fourth day of June last Charles S. Mellen, President of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, was invited to Curtis Guild, Jr., Governor of Massachusetts, a communication which contained this statement, to wit:

"Interests identified with my company have acquired a large stock interest in the Boston & Maine Railroad and have entered into agreement to acquire such additional stock as may desire to avail of the terms within a reasonable time in the future. * * * While no shares of Boston & Maine stock are held by my company and no pas has been proposed any shall be, still it is unquestionable true the purchases made and held for its account in the hope and belief an ultimate union of the two properties will be permitted, and when the results of a common control are made manifest it is believed the benefits will so appeal to the interests of the Commonwealth as to warrant a consolidation of the two properties into one system, with such restrictions and regulation, of course, as may seem necessary and desirable to safeguard all interests."

Mellen's Explanation of Why He Bought Stock

There appears on pages 100 and 101 of the official stenographic report of the public hearings held by the Massachusetts legislative committee on railroads, under date of June 11, the following questions by Senators Mahoney and Peker and answers by President Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad:

Q. (By Senator Mahoney)—I should like to ask Mr. Mellen, through you, Mr. Chairman, to explain to this committee, if he will, why the usual mode of procedure was not complied with in this instance in getting to the Legislature for permission to merge these two roads?

A.—First, there is no disposition to merge them at the present time; and, second, there was a large block of stock of the Boston & Maine Railroad that was going to be sold, and we were asked to buy it, and we felt that if we didn't buy that day would pass, and we would lose it, and we bought quickly—not the corporation, but interests identified with the corporation, and they are so identified with the corporation that I don't want in any nice technical threads. What has been done would not have been done but for the corporation. The way it has been done is immaterial. The corporation stands here before this committee to all intents and purposes as if it had done it itself. We don't dodge one bit. We bought it because we must buy it or lose it, and had we not bought them we could never have bought. I use the term 'we' not guilty, the New York, New Haven & Hartford, but the individuals who established themselves to protect what they conceived to be the interests of the New York, New Haven & Hartford before it was too late, and it was too late to come before the committee or the Legislature, for the time for introduction of business had passed when the matter reached the stage that we must act.

Q. (Peker)—Mr. Mellen, have you a control of the majority of stock of the Boston & Maine to-day?

A.—No, sir.

Q.—How many shares of the Boston & Maine Railroad have you in your possession at the present time?

A.—Well, I have not possession, and you have seen a story, but the statement that I refer to I should say approximately to-day had 100,000 shares.

Admits That He Controls Destinies of New Haven

Q.—And you have not the controlling interest in the Boston & Maine in the way of stocks?

A.—Not in the sense that it is more than one half, but substantially for all intents and purposes, for the voting power I should assume that 100,000 shares was practical control. That is, there is always a certain percentage of the stock of a corporation that cannot be gotten out at a stockholder's meeting, and a large holding and property, that can be gotten out at a meeting, so large as this, would probably represent a voting control.

Q.—Then to all intents and purposes you do hold the controlling interest in the Boston & Maine, is that your answer?

A.—That is as you may state it. I have stated the facts. You may draw such conclusions as you may see fit.

Again on page 203 of the same report, Q. (by Senator Mahoney)—Will you tell this committee whether or not the action which is under advisement of exchanging stocks between those two companies, the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the Boston & Maine, was brought about by any threatening desire on the part of another railroad, not mentioned, to control and purchase the Boston Maine?

A.—I can answer that question, and yet I would be likely misunderstood on for me to answer, for my relations with the railroad [illegible] was most friendly and I settled in a most satisfactory manner, and I do not feel that I am at liberty to say, and we are all guessing in Massachusetts, you and I, as to what was behind it. The railroad would have gone to the New York, New Haven & Hartford, and I was perfectly free to say that I don't think them believe it was better that we should

Petsold, Held as Slayer in $7,000 Bail, Cries

"I DIDN'T KILL GIRL"

Bouses Officer He Knew from Bed and Asks to Be Placed in Town Lockup.

PASCOAG, R. I., Aug. 22.—Ernest A. Petsold, the accused slayer of little Helen May Brown, was today held in $7,000 bail on a charge of manslaughter.

"I am innocent," he declared to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter.

Petsold, who has been hunted day and night for over a week since the finding of the mutilated body of the young girl, surrendered at midnight last night.

sold. "I didn't kill her that day. She was sick. I sent for a doctor, and he came four hours later. During that time the child died."

Petsold, who gave himself up to Andrew Higgins, whom he knew well, stoutly denies that he knows anything of the little girl's death, and at the farmhouse of the Higginses and in the Harrisville lockup today he talked freely of his experiences since the little girl was found dead in the McNally farm, where her mother was housekeeper for Petsold.

It was just after midnight when Mrs. Higgins heard Petsold outside the screen door of their house and awoke Jay husband, saying, "There's Petsold outside and he's calling you."

Surrenders to Friend.

When Mr. Higgins, who is the head in charge of the hunt for Petsold by day, went out Petsold smiled and said, "Well, I'm here to give myself up. If you'll treat me right. As long as I knew you I decided to give myself up to you."

Mr. Higgins invited his prisoner into the kitchen, and the latter was given a hearty meal, telling his story to the Higginses as he ate.

"I did not strike the child. I didn't kill her. That day she was sick. I sent for a doctor and he came four hours later. During that time the child died.

"When I discovered Helen was dead, I thought her mother ought to be notified. I went to Providence and found Mrs. Brown, walked on the street with her. I did not at that time tell the mother that her child was dead.

Explains His Silence.

"I tried to get her to come home with me, but she would not come. The reason I wanted her to come back was so I could break the news to her on the way. She refused, however, and I decided then that if I told her on the street, she might create a scene, and rush back. That was all she do, I left her and returned to Pascoag.

"After I returned, why I ran away I can see no reason. But I left the house and went into the woods. That night, Wednesday, returning on Friday, I changed my clothes for a suit of overalls.

"Then I went away from Pascoag, and took the train to Providence. I have been there most of the time since, some of the time at my mother's house in North Providence. I read in the papers of the search for me, and could not see that she as I was entirely innocent of any crime. It would be best to surrender and face whatever charge the officials should bring against me."

Asks to Be Locked Up.

After Petsold had told his story and satisfied his hunger, Mr. Higgins asked him what he desired to do. He offered to let him sleep in the house until morning or to take him to Harrisville and lock him up at once. He suggested that if they waited till daylight there would be a crowd about the street, whereas if they proceeded to town immediately such publicity would be avoided. Petsold chose the latter course, saying, "Well, lock me up now."

Mr. Higgins hitched up and the two men drove to the lock-up at Harrisville, where Petsold spent the rest of the night. At daylight he sent for some cigars, a collar and necktie, at the same time asking for a razor, that he might make himself presentable in court.

Though he is a trifle shaky, Petsold does not appear greatly worried. To Town Sergeant Higgins after he had surrendered he remarked that he was very sorry that he had caused them such a chase, as the men who have been engaged in the hunt since a week ago Wednesday did not hear of his surrender until about 6 o'clock today. When they were told the news they said the men who have been watching the McNally farm, which Petsold worked, were still on guard, with guns in their hands, scattered about the woods in the vicinity.

Mother Hears of Surrender.

Mrs. Walter T. Brown, the mother of the dead child, is a complete wreck, and was in bed when the news of Petsold's surrender was told her. She and her husband are now living at the house of William Eddy, across from the McNally farm.

It was while she was visiting her husband at Providence that the child died. For some time previously she had not been living with her husband. She left the McNally farm, where she had been keeping house for Petsold, a week ago Saturday, leaving little Helen, only seven years old, with Petsold, saying that she was going to see relatives in Fair Haven. For four days, up to the child's death, she was alone with the young farmer, and he says that it was a fall from an apple tree that resulted in her death on Wednesday morning.

PRETTY WOMAN SUES DOCTOR

BROCKTON, Aug. 22.—Lillian E. Corbett of Boston, milliner and card reader, and reasonably attractive woman of thirty-one years, now in a sanitarium, has brought suit against Dr. C. Ernest Perkins, dentist, one of Brockton's best known men, for $25,000, alleging that he injured her so that she is unable to conduct her millinery establishment.

Miss Corbett tells her attorney a romantic story of being married in good faith to a man who already had a wife, of breaking with him when she learned of his falsity, and of an attack alleged to have been made upon her by Dr. Perkins when she visited his office for work on her teeth. She alleges she was drugged by the doctor. In 1905 a daughter was born to her in Bridgewater, since when she has been in a feeble state of health.

Dr. Perkins is known as an expert bowler, golf player, lecturer at the Harvard Dental School and member of several clubs.

STOCKS UP IN SHARP ADVANCE

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Stocks rallied sharpley in Wall street to-day. Advances of from 1 to 2 points were scored in leading issues.

Talon Pacific, Amalgamated, Reading and Delaware & Hudson were most active. The industrials were neglected, but were also strong on advances.

Buying was very cautious, however, on the part of the public, and most of the rally was due to the fear of shorts that something would be done by Washington to change public sentiment.

The rumor circulated in Wall street again that Secretary Root would resign from the cabinet because of disagreement with President's politics.

FINED $10 FOR ASSAULT.

James Nunan and Francis Wilson, two attendants at the Medfield Insane Asylum, were fined $10 by Judge Grover in the Dedham Police Court to-day, charged with assault and battery on Patrolman John Murray of the Medfield police.

HAGUE ZIONIST CONGRESS ENDS

THE HAGUE, Aug. 22.—The closing day of the eighth international Zionist congress, which has been in session in this city since August 14, was marked with great enthusiasm.

David Wolffsohn of Cologne delivered the closing speech, dwelling upon the success of the congress which, for the first time in spite of divergence of opinion, had united in support of the idea of proceeding by political action to practical work for the deliverance of the poor Jewish people.

YALE MAN PAYS IN DEATH SUIT

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 22.—Henry McDonald Sedley, a former Yale student, has settled a suit for $25,000 for killing Edward Frank Corrigan of New London, a fellow-student, in the Yale bi-centennial week in 1901.

They had a scuffle in a night lunch room about daybreak, and Sedley was charged with pushing Corrigan off the steps to the ground. Corrigan broke his neck. Sedley was arrested and charged with manslaughter, but Coroner Mix dropped the charge after the parents started the civil suit. Sedley left college after the affair.

HIT BY CARS, SLAPS DRIVER, FINED $15

Dennis M. Crowley, a wealthy contractor of West Quincy, took offence at being hit by a trolley car in Dorchester on August 8. He stepped the face of Motorman John Graham of No. 707 Fifth street, South Boston, and then wanted to whip the conductor of the car. As a result Judge Reed in the Dorchester Municipal Court to-day fined the contractor $15. He appealed.

NOTED ALIENIST SAYS "MRS. EDDY IS SANE"

DR. FRENCH, HEAD OF STATE ASYLUM, AFFIRMS DR. HAMILTON'S VERDICT.

CONCORD, N. H., Aug. 22.—Alfred Farlow of Boston, head of the Christian Science publicity committee, to-day made public the report of Dr. Edward French, superintendent of the State Asylum for the Insane at Concord, N. H., in which Mrs. Eddy is declared perfectly sane and capable of managing her own affairs.

Dr. French, who is considered one of the foremost alienists on diseases of the mind, on July 30, 1907, at the solicitation of the personal Mrs. Eddy, made a personal examination of the head of the Christian Science church at her home in Concord.

His expert opinion coincides with that of Dr. Hamilton, expressed yesterday.

Dr. French's letter to the counsel follows:

HARDING, Mass., July 16, 1907.

Streeter & Hollis, North Main street, Concord, N. H.:

Gentlemen—In reply to your favor of July 15 concerning a mental examination made by me of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy on July 15, 1907:

I was given opportunity at Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy's home to obtain a full and complete examination into her mental state and responsibility. Her mental applications I found good; also conversation with her physician, Dr. Foster Kennedy, and her post events was excellent. Her sense of time was excellent. As my request she wrote a letter with my pencil, which was well executed, and in all considered a very coherent both in language and idea. I asked her many questions concerning personal matters, her business affairs, and her domestic relations, into her past life. I found fully sane and about the average of healthy persons of her years.

She gave me freely her reasons for applying for the writ of habeas corpus petition of each man selected by her for this trust. I am fully persuaded that there was not the least evidence of mental weakness or incompetency, and I was impressed with her intelligence and business ability. In my opinion she is mentally capable and competent to manage her own affairs of whatever nature. Very truly yours,

(Signed) EDWARD FRENCH, M. D.

Dr. French was formerly connected with the State Asylum for the Insane at Concord, N. H., with the McLane Hospital of Massachusetts and has been superintendent at Medfield, Mass., for a number of years.

4 HURT IN CAR CRASH NEAR NORTH STATION

TROLLEY, LADEN WITH PASSENGERS, COLLIDES WITH COAL CAR.

Four persons, three of them women, were seriously injured early to-day, and several others severely jolted, in a head-on collision between a crowded electric car and a freight car loaded with coal at the junction of Portland and Merrimac streets, in the North End.

Following are those who were hurt and taken to the Relief Hospital:

Rose McArdle, twenty-nine, of No. 1 Taunton street, Somerville. Both bones of left leg fractured; serious condition.

Bridget Dooley, thirty-six, of No. 16 Lowell street, East Cambridge. Contusions and shock.

Theresa Kane, twenty-three, of No. 291 East Cambridge street, Cambridge. Contusions and shock.

Edward Brodsemi, forty-one, of No. 1678 Cambridge street, Cambridge. Contusions and shock.

Crash During Rush Hour.

The accident took place at 7:30 o'clock. Traffic was very heavy at that time, the cars being jammed with people on their way to their employment in Boston. The passenger car was bound for Bay View, and the passengers were mostly from Cambridge, Somerville and that section.

The car-load left the North Station at Portland street and was turning into Chardon, just then the freight car, headed in the opposite direction on Merrimac street, crashed into it.

The impact of the cars was terrific. The air was rent with the cries of the injured and badly frightened passengers and filled with the flying splinters of broken wood and iron.

Hurry Call for Ambulance.

A great crowd quickly gathered about the wrecked cars and a hurry call was sent in for an ambulance. It was found that at least four of the passengers were severely hurt and others were tossed about so roughly that they were unable to continue in their work.

The motorman of the passenger car was Arthur W. Manning, of No. 1918 Fourth street, South Boston. He saw the loaded freight car headed for him, and, being unable to avoid the collision, jumped from the platform to save himself. He was not injured. The conductor of the car was Joseph Flanagan, of No. 23 Glenwood avenue, Roxbury.

The coal cars in charge of Joseph Zoffonte. When asked by a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN for an explanation of the accident, he said:

"The rails were slippery and I could not stop the car. I tried it, but the wheels slid along the track, and we crashed into the other car. I did all I could to avoid the collision."

Accident Blocks Traffic.

No arrests were made. Traffic was tied up for about half an hour. At the hospital it was said that Rose McArdle was so badly hurt that she would be removed to the City Hospital at once. The others, on attache of the hospital said, would probably be able to leave the hospital for their homes to-day.

STREET TEAMS LAID OFF; FEAR FINANCE PROBE

That Mayor Fitzgerald is worried over the insistent investigation of the Finance Commission into his administration is shown in the wholesale lopping off of teams in the Street Department, now going on. While it is necessary to hire many outside teams for city work, many more are placed on the payrolls because of political influence.

To escape the storm of protest which is going up from politicians, big and little, over the laying off of teams, Street Superintendent James H. Doyle has temporarily subdivided, and the orders to lay off the teams are being given by Acting Superintendent James H. Sullivan, consulting engineer of the Street Department. Mr. Doyle, it is given out at City Hall, is the agent of "Farmer" Lee at the latter's palatial summer at Sankeretille, N. H.

People looking for Mr. Doyle within the last day or two, however, have been able to find him without traveling very far from City Hall.

Last year $30,000 was paid out by the city for outside teams for the street department, $60,000 for the sanitary department and $10,000 for the sewer department. The lay-offs of the street department teams, it is expected, will be followed by those in the sanitary departments.

MAYOR'S SECRETARY TO ENTER POLITICS

Mayor Fitzgerald's secretary, Arthur W. Dolan, will resign his position within the next week or two to become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for registrar of probate and insolvency, to fill the unexpired term of Elijah George, appointed by Governor Guild as judge of probate. Councilman David T. Montague of Ward 25 was appointed by Governor Guild to fill the vacancy and will serve until his successor is elected.

MOORS RETURN TO ATTACK ON CASABLANCA

CASABLANCA, Aug. 22.—Skirmish attacks on the French troops at Casablanca began at daybreak today, and, according to latest advices, was growing general along the entire line occupied by the Frenchmen. A general engagement and an attempt to take Casablanca will probably be made soon. That a force of 500 sharpshooters are also here today, accompanied by 1,000 native troops. If Casablanca is to be taken it must be before the worn-out troops under General Drude are reinforced, which is improbable, as the city is imminent.

The Moors were heavily reinforced this morning, a number of bands arriving at their camps. Among these are deserters of the regular Morocco army. General Drude has telegraphed the government that more reinforcements are absolutely necessary and should be sent at once today. The soldiers are convinced that their present force is entirely inadequate to withstand a general and persistent attack. During last night there was a constant rattle of rifle fire from the ranks of the sharpshooters who were preventing Moors from stealing into the town under cover of darkness.

have it than they should have it. It would have gone there had it not gone where it is, and I am therefore not am obliged to discuss of it."

Again on page 207 questions by Senator Vest:

Q—If no legislation is passed either against a consolidation or in favor of it, don't the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company now, according to the figures that you have given, the practical voting control of the Boston & Maine Railroad.

Dodges Questions of Domination of B. & M.

A—No. The New York, New Haven & Hartford has no voting control, but the interests that I have referred to have that voting control. They are largely interested in the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, and I don't believe they are going to fight with themselves about that control or how they shall vote.

Q—Are you willing, representing your railroad, if the Legislature will permit the passage of such a bill under a suspension of the rules enabling your company to acquire the control of the Boston & Maine Railroad with the consent of the Legislature or relinquish any control which your road now has?

A—Well, it has not any control.

Q—Well, the figures in which I am identified with your road, and which are so friendly to you, show that you will vote the policy of the Boston & Maine Railroad in your company's case.

A—I don't say that at all.

Q—Don't you think they will?

A—Well, I would refer them to them and let you know after the conference. I don't think there would be any serious dispute on the subject.

Q—You believe you can, do you?

A—I wouldn't be surprised.

Q—Well, Mr. Bacon, if you will pardon me, I think it is fairer to us all to have you express your opinion about it frankly.

A—Well, what do you mean by a frank answer?

Q—Do you believe, or don't you believe, that those intrats which are identified with your company will vote the policy, or will control the policy, of the Boston & Maine Railroad in the future?

A—Let me put it in this way, senator, and I think it will be sufficiently explicit: I don't believe that those interests would probably vote for the purchase by the Boston & Maine Railroad at the next annual meeting that I would urge them to, is that sufficient?

Q—I think that is absolutely sufficient.

A—I hoped it would be.

Q—I don't know that I have any right to ask you this question.

A—I waive all that. I waive all the rights.

Q—I want you to tell, if you will, if the interests which prompted the securing of those shares of stock of the Boston & Maine railroad were originally with your company or the Boston & Maine?

"Stockholders Pooled; Interests for Sale"

A—The interest that brought the matter to my attention was a brokerage firm that had the control of a large amount of the stock sufficient to prove a menace to the control of the Boston & Maine Railroad, and it was in their hands for sale. That is the way the matter first came to my attention.

Q—That large holdings of stock in the Boston & Maine railroad were for sale.

A—Had passed their interests for sale.

Q—And had actually been put in the hands of brokers?

A—It was brought to me by brokers, and that was the first information I had of the situation.

Q—And then you conferred, I assume, with interests which were friendly to your company?

A—Most decidedly.

Q—And then those interests at your suggestion bought that stock?

A—Yes, sir.

Q—But you practically dominate the transaction?

A—Well, I think so long as I have the confidence of those interested they would probably be willing to do as I suggested. I want to put myself in such a position as having their confidence and their friendship and fairness, because I don't—A man's name of his section and personality must be behind such a movement as that. They are how short other things; they trust him and follow him for a time and until he proves unworthy. That is the position I started with regard to those interests.

Q—Is it safe to say that those interests would not have acted except for you?

A—Absolutely. I think they would not. I think I am the only one.

Q—And you acted in the interest of your company?

A—I acted, as I believe, in the interest of my company.

Q—But you act in the interest of your company?

A—That remains to be seen. I think so.

Q—Were the interests of your company paramount in your mind?

A—Certainly. That is my principal duty. Nobody has been benefited by that company. Everything else goes to that company.

Inclined to Think He Controlled Situation

Q—Now, then, Mr. Mellen, having said that the interests of your company were paramount in your mind at the time that you took advantage first as you with the large holdings of the Boston & Maine stock, and that you have sufficient influence with those interests to be able to say who the next board of directors of the Boston & Maine shall be, Mr. Senator, I—I did not say that, Mr. Senator. I said that I believe that those interests would vote their stock which directed as I might suggest. I didn't say they would elect the board. I don't know that I don't hold a majority.

Q—You have a very strong suspicion that they would be elected, haven't you?

A—I am a little inclined to think that might be the case. (Laughter.)

Q—Now, Mr. Mellen, [illegible] Mr. A. S. May, treasurer of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, in an application to the Committee on Stock List of the New York Stock Exchange, made the following statement:

"The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company therefore makes application hereby for the listing of $100,000,000 of capital stock, divided into 200,000 shares of the par value of $100 per share, as an addition to the said capital stock, heretofore listed, of $93,453,300, divided into 918,781 shares of the par value of $100 per share, so as to make the total capital stock of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company authorized to be listed $121,878,100, divided into 1,218,781 shares of $100 each. This additional stock will be used mainly for the purpose of acquiring in this company's interest shares of stock of the Boston & Maine Railroad, which when acquired will be a treasury asset; such portion of the 200,000 shares to be listed from time to time on official notice from this company that the same has been issued for the purpose stated."

These statements by authorized representatives of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company show that the purchase of control of the Boston & Maine Railroad, and that these shares were acquired with the intent to control the Boston & Maine Railroad.

Planned to Hold Stock as Asset in Treasury

Second—That these shares held by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company as a practical control of the Boston & Maine Railroad.

Third—That the holders of the controlling interest in the stock of the Boston & Maine Railroad will exert their control as directed by the president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, acting in its interest and on its behalf, and will elect a board of directors designated by him.

Fourth—That the holders of the controlling interest in the Boston & Maine Railroad, and the New York, New Haven & Hartford proposes to acquire it and hold it as a treasury asset.

These transactions, we believe, amount to violation of the act of Congress of July 2, 1890, entitled, "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies."

These acquisitions of stock in the Boston & Maine were not the first acquisitions of interests for the sake of the investment. The same has occurred relative to the control of the Boston & Maine railroad in the interest of the New York, New Haven & Hartford. They were acquisitions by persons controlling the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, and were in contravention of the anti-trust law.

Section 1 of the act of Congress declares a combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations illegal. Section 2 makes it a misdemeanor for any person to monopolize or attempt to monopolize or combine or conspire with any other person or persons to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations.

Section 3 declares every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce in any territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, or in restraint of trade or commerce between any such territory and another, or between any such territory and any state or foreign nation, or between the District of Columbia and any state or territory or foreign nation, is illegal.

Section 4 gives the circuit courts of the United States jurisdiction to prevent and restrain violations of the act, and section 5 provides for the institution of proceedings in equity to prevent and restrain such violations by the district attorneys of the United States.

Section 6 declares that any property owned under any contract or by any combination or pursuant to any conspiracy (and especially trusts and monopolies) mentioned in section 1 of the act, and being the subject thereof, shall be forfeited to the United States, and may be seized and condemned by like proceedings as those provided by law for the forfeiture, seizure and condemnation of property imported into the United States contrary to law.

In United States vs. Trans-Missouri Freight Association, 166 United States Reports, Northern Securities Company vs. United States.

In United States vs. Trans-Missouri Freight Association, 166 United States, it is said:

"Every contract, combination or conspiracy in restraint of interstate or foreign commerce is illegal, no matter what form it may be clothed, or whether it be adopted in bringing about the combination by one corporation, or by the formation of a holding corporation, for the purpose of circumventing the act, or by the use of any other device by corporations or individuals, as a part of a scheme to bring about a combination of competing companies—practical consolidation through the pooling of earnings and virtual pooling in the stocks—in restraint of interstate or foreign commerce, some or all of the provisions of the statutes."

Rulings in Notable Anti-Trust Law Case.

In Northern Securities Co. vs. United States the same court said:

We will not encumber this opinion by extended extracts from the former opinions in this case. It is sufficient to say that from the decisions in the above cases certain propositions are plainly deducible, and embrace the present case. These propositions are:

That although the act of Congress known as the Anti-Trust act has reference to the mere manufacture or production of articles or property within the limits of the several States, it does embrace and declare to be illegal every contract, combination or conspiracy, in whatever form, of whatever nature, and by whomsoever may be parties to it, which directly and immediately places the control of trade or commerce among the several States or with foreign nations under the power of any Combination, which this court need not consider or determine.

That the act is not limited to restraints of interstate and international trade or commerce that are unreasonable in their nature, but embraces all direct restraints imposed by any combination, conspiracy or monopoly upon such trade or commerce.

That railroad carriers engaged in interstate or international commerce are clearly embraced by the act.

That considerations, even among private manufacturers or dealers, whereby interstate commerce is restrained are restrained are equally embraced by the act.

That Congress has the power to establish rules for interstate and international commerce shall be governed, and that the Anti-Trust Act has prescribed the rule of free competition among those engaged in such commerce.

That any combination or conspiracy which would extinguish competition between roads engaged in interstate commerce which would in that way restrain such trade or commerce is unduly illegal.

That the natural effect of competition is to increase commerce, and on agreement whose direct effect is to prevent competition and monopolize instead of promoting trade and commerce.

That to violate a combination such as the act of Congress condemns it need not be shown that the combination, in fact, results or will result in the complete suppression of trade or a complete monopoly, but it is only essential to show that by such combination it tends to restrain interstate or international trade or commerce or tends to create a monopoly in such trade or commerce, and all these things are the advantages that flow from free competition.

Merger Comes Within Prohibitions of Act.

That the constitutional guaranty of liberty of contract does not prevent Congress from prescribing the rule of free competition for those engaged in interstate and international commerce; and,

That under its power to regulate commerce among the several states and with foreign nations, Congress had authority to enact the statute in question.

If the union, a Maine and the New York, New Haven & Hartford are competing roads, a combination or conspiracy so to control or to destroy or restrict competition between them is within the prohibition of the Act of 1890, according to the Supreme Court in the same case.

The means employed in respect of the competition forbidden by the Anti-Trust Act, and which Congress deemed germane to the end to be reached, need not be prescribe as a rule for interstate and international commerce but for domestic commerce that it should not be vexed by combinations, conspiracies or monopolies which restrain commerce by destroying or restricting competition. We say that Congress has prescribed such a rule, because, in all the cases in which the Anti-Trust Act has been construed as forbidding any combination which, by its necessary operation, destroys or restricts free competition among those engaged in interstate commerce; in other words, that to destroy or restrict free competition in interstate commerce was to restrain such commerce. Now, can there be any doubt that such a rule is prohibited by the Constitution? Congress could appropriately prescribe when exerting its power under the commerce clause of the Constitution? Whether the free operation of the natural laws of competition is a wise and wholesome rule for trade and commerce is an economic question, which this court need not consider or determine.

That the general rule is that competition among those engaged in interstate commerce is the life of trade, and that the destruction of competition by any combination, conspiracy or monopoly upon such trade or commerce is illegal.

That combinations, even among private manufacturers or dealers, whereby interstate or international commerce is restrained are equally embraced by the act.

That Congress has the power to establish rules for interstate and international commerce shall be governed, and that the Anti-Trust Act has prescribed the rule of free competition among those engaged in such commerce.

Lines in Competition for Western Traffic.

In the sense of the statute and of its construction by the federal courts the Boston & Maine and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railways are in competition with each other. By their own lines they are enabled and compelled to reach Marlboro, Fitchburg, Springfield, Worcester, Northfield, Boston, Holyoke and Greenfield; by the joint through arrangement between the New York Central and the New Haven they have competing access to Albany. Both roads are in active and sharp competition for freight and passenger business with western points. The Erie Railroad at No. 1—Over the Fitchburg Division via Boston & Maine, Chicago, via West Shore and Nickel Plate. The Nickel Plate route has through sleeping cars to Chicago, but hotandard and tourists' cars.

No. 2—By way of the Fitchburg Division, Delaware and Hudson and the Erie. This train has through sleeping cars to Chicago, and competes as a parallel and competing line with the New York, New Haven in its connection from Boston.

No. 3—Over the Boston & Maine to White River Junction thence over the Central Vermont Railroad to St. John, Q., thence over the Grand Trunk to Chicago. There are two trains each day over this route.

Interstate Board Makes No Distinction

No. 5—Over Boston & Maine to Newport, Vt., thence over Canadian Pacific to junction at Sault Ste. Marie, over the Minneapolis, St. Paul, etc., with connection at Chicago; two trains a day. This route affords the only trains out of Boston with standard sleeping cars to St. Paul, Minneapolis without change. It thus appears that every point in the West and North which the New Haven reaches by its New York and other connections is reached by the Boston & Maine through its own numerous connections. The trackage lease or agreement between the New Haven and the New York Central accomplishes the competition between the New Haven and the Boston & Maine in interstate traffic.

With respect to interstate commerce the roads are distinct and connecting, but are competing, save in the sparsely settled and unmanufacturing regions of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

The Great Northern Railroad, 181 U. S. 606, The Court said: "That the transfer is to be made not directly to the company but to the share holders in numerical shares is may be assumed that they would cast their votes in the interest of the company."

You will pardon me if I lengthen this communication by reproducing in extenso the report of the speech delivered by Senator Lodge which was duly reported in the public press Tuesday, and in several other things of the same importance are probably ex cathedra of the Senator's views upon the subject of the present statement:

"The only sound means of eliminating competition among interstate lines serving the same territory is the purchase by one road of the stock in another, and the election of directors to represent the ownership.

"The evil ought further to be directly prohibited by law, and the power of the interstate railway to acquire stock in a competing line should be absolutely ready of meeting the evil than by recourse to the Sherman anti-trust law, which applies in each case. In addition to this, competing lines should be prohibited from having common directors or officers."

The Interstate Commerce Commission, than which there is no more respected public body in the country, in its annual, No. 1, report, No. 943, after an exhaustive inquiry into the methods and consequences of recent railroad consolidations, states this conclusion:

Contrary to Public Policy, Says Commission

"It is contrary to public policy, as well as unlawful, for railways to acquire control of parallel and competing lines. This policy is expressed in the federal laws and in the constitutions and laws of nearly all the States in the Union. We have examined the constitutions and laws of all the States, and find in about forty of them prohibitions against consolidation or capital stock or franchises of competing railways, or the purchase and acquisition by a railway of competing lines. Competition between railways as well as between other industries is the established policy of the nation. And while the acquisition of a majority of the stock of a competing line might not decrease the competition of the two roads to any considerable amount of stock, with representation on the board of directors of such railway, unquestionably has the effect of diminishing competition and lessening to that extent its effectiveness. So long as it is the policy of the United Government and of the States to maintain competition between naturally competing lines, the ownership of any stock by one railway in a competing railway should not be permitted, and such lines of railway should be prohibited from having any common directors or officers."

The facts, the law and the policy as determined by the administration of which you are a part all seem to indicate that a clear duty lies with you which you will probably not be loath to accept—to invoke the powers given you by the anti-trust law to break up this unlawful conspiracy against trade and against the welfare of Massachusetts and New England.

Respectfully,
GRENVILLE S. MacFARLAND,

CAPITALIST SAYS RAILROAD MERGER IS PRACTICALLY SURE

A New England capitalist, for many years identified with railroad affairs, says through the Boston News Bureau today:

"To my mind when the Massachusetts Legislature finally decides to allow the Boston & Maine and the New York, New & Hartford merger to go through as it doubtless will, it will be consummated in not less than 7 per cent. It would be worth while for the New York, New Haven & acquire control of the Boston & Maine on that basis.

"If the New Haven is finally obliged to adopt the method to secure control of the Boston & Maine, the practical operation of the lease would work to the advantage of the New Haven in several ways. For the New Haven could retain the Boston & Maine stock it has already secured and give to the minority stockholders of the Boston & Maine a 7 per cent guaranteed stock, or guaranteed stock, Boston & Maine common would, of course, fall in price on a bond basis, or, say $180 to $190 per share in normal market conditions. In this event the problem of financing Boston & Maine construction work would not be nearly so burdensome to the New Haven as a bond. The merger were complete and the New Haven were obliged to issue its own 5 per cent stock for this purpose, for the guaranteed Boston & Maine stock would command more than $30 more in the market relatively than the New Haven stock.

"Furthermore, under a long-time lease, the New Haven would have no need of refunding its Boston & Maine shares, which it could use as guaranteed stock at a handsome profit above the cost price."

PHONOGRAPH "DOG BATTLE" MADDENS TOWN

WATERBURY, Aug. 22.—Yelps, growls, barks, snarls, squeals of dogs, and shouts of men, "Eat him up, Buster!" "Sic him, Tige!" continue to emanate from Edson Atwood's house at Woodbury.

Mr. Atwood's phonograph, with the record of a dog fight in it, continues to issue persistent and awful warning to all Woodbury dogs that they will be attacked if they keep the town awake.

Mr. Woodbury's children were playing with Red Turtle's poodle dog Sunday.

"I wish you would keep your poodle away from my children. I'm afraid it will bite them," said Mr. Woodbury to Mr. Turtle, his neighbor.

"No well-bred dog ever bit anything," retorted Mr. Turtle.

The answer nettled Mr. Atwood. One word led to another and Atwood, furious, parted from Tuttle, exclaiming "I'll show you whether a well-bred dog will bite anything."

Hurrying home, he started his phonograph with the record of a dog fight which he happened to have. Then he left the phonograph going. For hours on Sunday Woodbury sounded like a kennel, a dogpound, Constantinople, with its hordes of hungry mongrels. At night a crowd of boys and young men, encouraged by the sleepless inhabitants, stoned Mr. Atwood's house. He chased them, but caught nobody.

Atwood came here yesterday and bought four bone-pistol balls. He consulted a lawyer as to how to protect his children, his home and his phonograph. The lawyer told him he could carry the pistols if he did not actually fire them. Mr. Atwood today is promenading Woodbury's main street, but will be more careful in his selection of phonograph records hereafter.

The musical dog fight goes on.

CARLIN GETS ANOTHER PLUM

By Boston American Leased Wire.

DENVER, Aug. 22. Simultaneously with the report that the Beef Trust had acquired the independent meat company in New York it became known that the firm of Schwarzschild & Sulzberger, the largest competitors of the Armours in the world, has secured options on several sites near the Denver stockyards for a $1,000,000 plant, to be erected as soon as the firm can arrange for carrying it anti-trust campaign into the West.

The people now have plants in Chicago, New York and Kansas City.

COMER FIGHTS FOR RATE LAW

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 22.—Governor Comer, in a statement issued here, said he would give the railroad companies until Saturday to comply with the recently enacted rate law. If they do not comply by that date, he will call a special session of the Legislature and urge the enactment of even more drastic laws.

TO SHIP JOHN SMITH STATUE TO VIRGINIA

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The beautiful bronze statue of Captain John Smith, which was cast here for the Society for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, will be shipped to Virginia tomorrow, where it will be unveiled at Jamestown Island. The statue, which is eight feet six inches high, is the work of William Ordway Cooper, the sculptor, and is cast in the finest bronze.

WED 28 YEARS, HAS HAD ONLY THREE GOWNS

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Three gowns in twenty-eight years of married life constitutes the chief complaint of Mrs. Cora M. Rotino, who has filed a petition for separation against her husband, Joseph Rotino, and received an allowance of $10 a week pending the trial of the case, and $50 counsel fees.

"That is all he has given me in all these years," said Mrs. Rotino; "besides I've went to many places of amusement and he never has taken me. He owns the yacht Gracie, Boston, who has also a large interest in the Caprice, which is worth $2,500. He owns the Grand Union Hotel, South Beach, Staten Island."

Mrs. Rotino says in addition to the salary her husband receives as interpreter in the Customs House, Manhattan Court, he is in partnership in business with F. W. Seligman & Co., Avenue and Eighteenth street, and also writes for the newspapers and receives pay for his work. Once, she says, he tried to put her in an insane asylum.

Rotino says that his wife's allegations are false, and that he has taken care of her and paid for his work. Once, she says, he tried to put her in an insane asylum.

Freed From Fear of Death in Plant Explosion

700 Wakefield Girls Recover From Panic

Laugh at Medium's Prophecy That Disaster Is Certain to Come.

Despite the prediction of a mediumistic nature that today the walls of the Harvard Knitting mill in Wakefield would be shattered by the explosion of a boiler, and the loss of life in the disaster would be large, the mill still stands, and to-day most of the seven hundred girls employed there are laughing at the fears to which they had given way.

Weeks of worry have come to an end and to-day the usually light-spirited employes are back in their places with less belief in the potency of clairvoyants' declarations than they previously held.

Many of the girls have in the past been firm believers in the trance mediums, and much of the patronage of these people in Wakefield and vicinity has come from the workers in this mill.

Now even the time limit set by the mediums has elapsed, the girls, who have been in a highly nervous state for weeks, have resumed the regular tenor of their way and the machines are humming as loud before for a long period, the work having been seriously hampered for some days past by the semi-hysterical condition of some of the employees, who held themselves in readiness to jump from the windows at the slightest indication that the prophecy of the fortune teller was coming true.

For weeks, since one of the girls employed in the mill yesterday, when a large number of the employes remained away from their work, although they had been told that to do so without reasonable excuse, would mean dismissal.

Others of the girls dressed in their best finery to go to the mill, wishing to appear as well as possible in case of accident or death.

The prediction of disaster was made by Mrs. A. L. King of Room 41 Wyoming Street, Melrose, who is said to have predicted the Brockton explosion.

Mrs. King has a wonderful reputation among the mill girls as a clairvoyant. She is consulted frequently by them.

Mrs. King herself could not be seen. BOSTON AMERICAN reporter that she had made the prediction of the explosion in the Wakefield mill.

She said, however, when the girl came to see her she told the mill workers:

"There is no danger except in the knitting mill where one work unless the boiler is inspected and the defect corrected by the management. If this boiler is not fixed by August 21 there will be trouble in that mill."

Mother Hurried from Ireland.

To show the extent to which belief in the explosion prophecy extended it is only necessary to point to the return from Ireland of Mrs. Charles Bateman, whose daughter Gladys is employed in the mill.

Disaster as pictured by a clairvoyant to one of the girl employes of the Harvard Knitting Mill, and Mrs. A. L. King, who made the dire prophecy.

sultated a soothsayer and was told of the coming catastrophe, the girls have talked of little else. Many of them consulted other mediums and the story having gained general circulation in the meantime, they claim to have been told a similar story.

Brave Girls Checked Panic.

Not all the girls were affected, and these brave girls succeeded in calming their weaker sisters in some sort of check up

When Mrs. Bateman heard of the fortune teller's prediction she cut her visit short and hurried home, although she had intended to remain abroad until Fall. Yesterday, while her daughter went to the mill, the mother waited anxiously on the doorstep the greater part of the day, ready to rush to the mill in event of trouble.

J. P. MORGAN BACK HOME; WONT TALK

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The liner Oceanic had a new figurehead when she was warped into her dock. J. Pierpont Morgan stood aboard and climbed out on the extreme bow of the ship, where there was none but deckhands and captains and was waving frantically at his partners and friends who had gathered in the offices of the White Star Line.

To reporters who had boarded the steamer at quarantine Mr. Morgan said:

"I am glad to see you all, but I have nothing to say."

"Have you read the President's speech?" asked a reporter, handing him a copy of the Providencetown address.

"I haven't read it, and I don't think it necessary to read it now," said Mr. Morgan. "When I talk I never deal in generalities, or say anything but fact. I want to take time to look over the situation."

NEW 'RIPPER' VICTIM PICKED UP IN RIVER

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Evidences of another fiendish "Jack the Ripper" crime came to light today in the discovery of a part of the body of a woman in the Hudson River at the foot of Bromfield street.

The gruesome discovery was made by Joseph Burke, employed on the steamship Raleigh. Burke saw a peculiar looking bundle in the water and brought it off with a boat hook. It proved to be a part of a woman's body, wrapped in manilla paper and then in a towel. The flesh was freshly cut and apparently had been in the water a short time, as the wrapping paper was not all wet.

Horrified at the discovery, Burke notified the police. Inspector Russell, Capt. Baldwin, Sergeant Hintz and Detectives Hartwood and Lynch made an investigation, and, aided by practically every policeman in the Charles street precinct, began a search for other portions of the body.

CASTLE SQUARE REVEALS PLANS

Plans for the coming season of opera at the Castle Square are completed. Mr. Mansom has chosen "The Serenade" for his opening week of September 2. "The Serenade," for which Victor Herbert wrote the music and Harry B. Smith the libretto, is well known through its presentation by the Bostonians, and next to "Robin Hood" it was the most popular piece in the repertory of that organization. Among the operas selected for production this season are "The Huguenots," "Lohengrin," "Aida," "Lucia," "Fra Diavolo," "Romeo and Juliet," "Ernani," "Carmen," "Faust," "The Rogar Students," "Mignon," "The Grand Duchess," "The Highwayman" and "The Wizard of the Nile."

LABOR SUIT WILL CHARGE CONSPIRACY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Following a meeting of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, President Gompers said that most probably the Federation would bring a counter suit against the National Manufacturers' Association, charging that body with conspiracy.

He charges that the recent Van Cleave injunction proceedings against boycotts and blacklisting of unions were instigated by the Manufacturers' Association, which, he said, recently decided to raise $1,500,000 to crush organized labor. Mr. Gompers said:

"The executive council of the American Federation of Labor decided to-day that the case to be met in the courts shall take on the broadest scope. The justification or exercise of our rights sought to be enjoined are not illegal or unlawful, and we will continue to assert them. We know we are within our legal rights and we propose to exercise them regardless of personal consequences."

DOG IS GIVEN $7.50 DINNER

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—Mrs. Lessie Carter Payne, the actress, was the hostess at a unique dinner given at the Bellevue-Stratford. The guest of honor was Dimple, her English bulldog. The pet's dinner footed up to $7.50.

"It was easily worth it," said Carter Payne.

Her husband, William L. Payne, seemed to derive considerable amusement from watching the bulldog partake of the highclass fare. However, the dinner was quite in line with other attentions showered upon Dimple. The little dog has a valet named Kelly, who wears English livery, including knee breeches.

Kelly manicured Dimple's nails yesterday as a preliminary to the dinner. This is what Dimple ate: Soup, fish, boiled lamb with peas and corn, and any amount of filtered water.

Dimple is a temperate dog, and wines were not served.

LOVERS OUTWIT CLOSE FRIENDS

FAIRYANS HOUSE, Fairyans, N. H., Aug. 22.—The vacationists here are sad and disappointed for today, for they have been outwitted by Miss Corintia Whitmore and William Dodge of Boston, who were quietly married last evening.

The bride is the daughter of the founder of the famous Whitmore Band, and the groom is a violinist of great ability.

The ceremony was performed in the Joseph Stickney Memorial Church of the Transfiguration at Bretton Woods.

SWAMP-ROOT is not recommended for everything, but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. At druggists in fifty cent and dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it.

FUN GALORE WHEN MAUD DOES STUNTS

Famous Mule Creates Spasms of Laughter for Wonderland Visitors.

HOOLIGAN ALSO ON DECK

A dollar for a minute if you can stay on the back of "Maud," the famous Hippodrome mule at Wonderland.

Unless you are accustomed to busting broncbos and have taken a long course of lessons from "Bill" in the AMERICAN Comic Supplement, don't you try it.

Maud is king of the pit at Blake's Animal Circus at Wonderland, variously called "The Pony-Monkey-Dog Circus," or the Hippodrome. She is one of the great big features that angers you almost to death and makes you laugh in your dreams for nights afterward.

Cream of Animal Intelligence.

As a setting for this Wonderland mule Messrs. Blake and Washburn have gathered under one tent the cream of animal intelligence of the country.

Happy Hooligan, the big manage, worth $10,000, actually talks, answers direct questions by a nod or a shake of his head, and Manager Washburn says he can speak a few words plainly enough to be understood.

They present the most wonderful ballyhoo on the outside with this and other fearsome monkeys, with a dog that climbs a seventy-foot ladder and jumps off into a net, and with a lot of pretty intelligent little ponies.

Inside the big tent all is excitement and joy from the moment the show opens. Dogs on tight ropes, dogs that box three rounds, dogs that play the horse, that jump, that show wondrous intellect. The other day a new puppy was bought at an enormous price, because he could turn back somersaults and do other things. No money is spared in getting up this show.

Then the ponies are such as you may never see again, so beautiful, so tractable, marching and counter-marching with precision, allowing dogs and monkeys to ride them. One of them plays sick to dodge work.

Happy Hooligan on the Scene.

Enter Happy Hooligan, and such a Hooligan. Perched upon the seat of a two-wheeled cart, holding reins over a huge ruminoo dog, he whirls upon the entire unannounced and gets to work.

The expression on the face of that sombre looking man-ape convulses all with laughter. He gives sardines to the goat, too. Then Hooligan gets a knife to bleed the pony, which thereupon jumps up and confesses to the murder of the man he was fating.

And Hooligan is an expert on a wheel. Round and round he rides on and off the stage. Throw him a bicycle from one side, he'sa down, over the ropes, anywhere Hooligan gets right to it. Stentorian voice of bawling, stands it up, mounts and away. And he never crashes. A subtler art of science does that. They roar and shout. Finally the big monkey comes on.

Enter Maud looking quiet but defiant. Her ears work cross-eyed and her optical work crosseyed. "A dollar for a minute and take your chances." That is the announcement.

How to Ride Maud.

Perhaps there are four candidates. The first one is thrown forty ways to Sunday and many times repeat. Maybe the second one is kicked, trampled, thrown and generally made to jump into the audience for safety. Occasionally one sticks, but it's a hard struggle it is.

With a grip around Maud's windpipe, one leg over the wither and the other tucked ingeniously inside the fore leg, may be the victim stays. But he earns his money about a million times.

Maud stands, hops, dances, waltzes, bucks, shies on her head and a hundred other things. When the sixty seconds are up the rider is a wreck, depending on the audience moved by fear for his safety, anger at the mule and twenty other emotions is uproarious and the effect doesn't wear off for a week. It's a nightmare ever after.

INJURED GIRL WILL CONTINUE HER DEATH DEFYING CYCLE LEAP

Sadie Knowlton of dare-devil-dip fame at Paragon Park says she will be able to go right on with her death-defying bicycle plunge in spite of the injury to her shoulder of last Monday, so this great Park feature will be open to SUNDAY AMERICAN free ticket holders next Monday and Tuesday.

The accident to the daring young woman came at an unfortunate time, just when she was starting to swim, for it is known that she has been plunging down the incline, toward the end of the dipping into ten feet of water all this time without being able to swim, depending upon the Park expert, "Shorty," who has been saving her life from the deep every twice a day throughout her engagement.

The general impression at Paragon Park is above all anticipation, according to Manager Dodge. Besides the usual array of fractions of merit, Paragon Park features its Flash Gordon and Buck Rogers, where the service is unexcelled by any hotel in Boston, the Bowery Burlesque Show and its wonderful circus, including Speedy, the world champion high diver and "The Human Spider" upon his rope.

The Human Spider's record has proved a star and steady winner and fun maker all through the season, and numerous prizes upon the whole have done very well. A part of the Park's success is due to the lingle ascribed to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN free ticket gifts and other BOSTON AMERICAN crowds.

The two massive crowds Monday and Tuesday were the biggest in Park history. Next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN will publish a full forty cents' worth of free tickets to Paragon Park, including admission at the gate and to the 25 cent. admission to Creation, to the Theatre and the Airship or Circle Swing.

As ever, the big elephant, "Ephi," will be a Park feature next week on compendious, having engagements to go down to Palm Garden and to wallow with the small boys at the Side Shows.

REVERE BEACH AND OTHER ATTRACTIONS FOR NEXT SUNDAY

SUNDAY AMERICAN coupons in its preceding numbers are pointing up upon the leading amusement places on Revere Beach this week. The cooling sea and fair weather is compensating for the late Spring and Summer and all is conducive to joy on the boulevard and avenues.

The places whose with next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN will publish free half-fare tickets are: Harris' Big Rainbow, Palace, Merry-to-Round, Automatic Bowling Alleys, Fairyland Theatre, Theatre Comique, Journey to the North Pole, Bough Rider Highland Fling, Shoot the Chute, Roliaway Skating Rink, Three-Way Figure, Eight Roller Coaster, Monorail Railway, and Auto-Go-Round.

AUTO WRECKED IN AFRICA.

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—Lieutenant Graetz of the Prussian army, who started on August 10 from Dar-es-Salaam, German East Africa, to cross Africa in an automobile, telegraphs that he is temporarily tied up at Mukalebuga, about 250 miles from Dar-es-Salaam by a crocked cylinder.

BARTLETT HITS SULLIVAN IN MERGER REPLY

General Charles W. Bartlett has made a public statement in answer to Congressman John A. Sullivan's merger question, in which he attacks the latter as a corporation man and a trickster, and also attacks Henry M. Whitney. He says:

"That there may be no further question as to whether or not I would sign a bill such as Mr. Sullivan, acting for my colleagues and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, has outlined, I will state specifically that I would not sign the bill. I pledge myself that in the event of my election to the high office of Governor I will transmit to the Legislature in my inaugural address or in a special message, a recommendation for the immediate passage of the most drastic legislation necessary to prevent the merger or consolidation of these two railroad systems.

"I believe the merger is a menace to Massachusetts and a blow to our interests. It is pertinent for me to state that my opponent is directly and indirectly, as director of the Boston & Maine Railroad and the American Express Company, interested in the proposed merger.

"As a representative of 50,000 shares of Boston & Maine Railroad, my opponent has aided and assisted the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad in attempting to obtain practical control of the Boston & Maine in defiance of the laws.

"Massachusetts Democrats should not allow themselves to be deceived or misled by the clouding of the issue attempted by my opponent and his chief lieutenant, former Congressman Sullivan.

"I am not surprised Mr. Sullivan is using his splendid talents to endeavor to effect a triumph for corporate interests and that he can resort to political tricks when necessity demands.

"The Democrats of Massachusetts need not recall the position occupied by Mr. Sullivan one year ago, when he led an unsuccessful campaign against the man who now mentions the name of the party at the convention.

"Mr. Sullivan, by word and action, in every way possible endeavored to prevent the nomination of John B. Moran, and when the latter received the nomination Mr. Sullivan sulked in his tent."

IVINS SMOKES OUT TRACTION BUNCO GAME

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—William M. Ivins has struck a rich lead while conducting the inquiry into the Ryan-Belmont traction merger before the Public Service Commission.

He forced surprising admissions from Belmont's personal representatives on the stand.

He showed that accounts of the company were juggled so that Belmont's salary as president of the company at $75,000 a year was charged to the construction account of the company instead of to the operating expenses.

Also that a contribution of $500 by Belmont to the National Civic Federation, of which he is now president, had been charged to the construction account of the company.

These and similar disclosures worried De Lancey Nicol and Paul B. Cravath, Belmont's counsel, greatly, and they tried repeatedly to sidetrack Mr. Ivins. Finally, after one of these attempts by Nicol, Mr. Ivins exclaimed:

"It is a question whether or not there is a report under the statute (referring to a formal report to the old Rapid Transit Commission as to the cost of the equipment of the Subway) and one for which someone is to be held criminally responsible. That is for the District Attorney and not for me."

This reference to criminal proceedings made Nicol furious.

"We will take care of that," he shouted. "You need not worry about that."

Expenditures for subway equipment amounting to $24,545,613 are given, of which no details are given, but which contain these particular items, in addition to those referred to above:

A discount of $450,000 to the banking firm of August Belmont & Co. for underwriting $10,000,000 of bonds of the company; a commission of three-quarters of one per cent. in addition for handling the same issue to Belmont's banking house.

Fees of $25,000 each to W. G. Oakman and Joseph H. Auerbach for arranging the lease of the elevated system to the subway company; $12,500 for a souvenir book describing the subway and praising Belmont's generosity to the city in constructing it and arranging to operate it, as well as fees to the directors of the operating company.

LAWSON TO RAKE WHITNEY OVER COALS

Thomas W. Lawson is to say "nasty" things about Henry M. Whitney in a speech delivered to-day at the Marshfield Fair, so he announces, and the directors of the Agricultural Society by which the exhibition is given have offered the consolidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor a chance to reply to Lawson from the same platform to-morrow. Whitney has been told of all this in a letter from Lawson, to which the latter says in part:

To-day when I informed the directors of our society that I had decided it was my duty to say some "nasty" things about your public career in my talk at the fair to-morrow they agreed that it would be but fair play, particularly as your opponent for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, General Bartlett, is to use the same platform for training practice, to offer you the facilities of the society's grounds, buildings and guests, and all the courtesies at their command, upon the last day of our annual event.

The invitation to Whitney is unanimously authorized by the fair directors, of which Lawson is one, besides being president of the Agricultural Society. Lawson, as "Frenzied Finance," accused Whitney of buying the Massachusetts Legislature in years past.

He offers to introduce Whitney as an orator at the fair.

Wife Flies Horsewhip on Insulting Husband, Winning Judge's Praise

Mrs. Elsie Miller, whose reply to h usband's insulting remark was a sound thrashing.

Pretty Mrs. Elsie Miller Received Only $7 a Week for Support While Horse's Board Cost as Much.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Mrs. Elsie Miller, pretty and well-dressed, has been freed in court and praised by a magistrate, after horsewhipping her husband. Young Mrs. Miller meted out the punishment to her hard hearted spouse after being neglected and insulted. The couple have been separated since July 26.

The horsewhipping took place at One Hundred and Tenth street and Amsterdam avenue. Pedestrians saw Mrs. Miller jump from a carriage near that corner about 6 o'clock in the evening. Her husband, with whom she had been driving, whipped up the horse and started over One Hundred and Tenth street. Mrs. Miller glanced at the departing carriage, meditated for a moment, then started in pursuit. The crowd followed.

Mrs. Miller ran alongside the carriage, seized the whip and brought it across her husband's face. Miller jumped from the carriage and a desperate struggle for the whip ensued, while the crowd howled. Policeman Petrie came along and Miller lonjly demanded his wife's arrest. In court Mrs. Miller told Magistrate Cornell that her husband is a gambler instead of a broker.

"He asked me to go riding in his carriage," she continued, "and I finally consented. He has been given me only $7 a week and pays $30 a month for his horse. I asked him where he kept the horse and he said well, he said 'none of your business.' I just made me mad and I jumped out of the carriage. When I got thinking over what he said I decided he ought to be horsewhipped. And I gave him a good horsewhipping, too."

"It's a lie," exclaimed Miller. "I found her drinking with two men, and she followed me."

Magistrate Cornell called Miller a "contemptible creature," and dismissed the charge against his wife.

"You did no more than right," said the magistrate to Mrs. Miller.

Another Solution.

Problem Editor—

My solution of the Boston cow problem is as follows: The area over which the cow can graze equals the sum of a circle 200 ft. in dia. minus the area of a sized 25 ft. square, thereby 200 ft. squared—40,000 sq. ft. 40,000 sq. ft.—7,854—31,416 sq. ft. area of circle 25 ft. squared—625 sq. ft.—625 sq. ft.—30,791 sq. ft. the area of ground over which the cow can graze.

BROWNE'S COW TAXES BRAINS OF BRIGHTEST

Professor Browne and his cow still hold first place among the brainstorming questions.

Have you tried it? If not, do it to-day. It looks easy but oh, my, when you come to figure it out—that's where the rickitch part comes in.

A cow is tied to a corner of a shed twenty-five feet square. The rope is 100 feet long. Over how much ground area is it possible for her to graze?

It is a corker. But try, and send in your answers to-day to the Problem Editor of the BOSTON AMERICAN.

Below are some of the answers received to-day:

A Short Answer.

Problem Editor—

My answer to Browne's cow is 30,872 sq. ft. or fig. 1 on the diagram.—JOSHUA S. CRADWICK, Anabel House, Maywood.

How It Is Done.

Problem Editor—

My method for finding area over which the cow grazed is by drawing ¼ of circle of 100 feet radius and then drawing a circle from next corner of 25 feet radius, and then from opposite corner diagonally of another circle of 75 feet radius, forming circles meeting in centre of square. Then by adding the area of the first and one of the third and subtracting between the two parts of 150 feet circle, 25 square feet, area of ¼ of 200 feet circle—23,562 square feet; area of 100 foot circle, 3,9269; area of triangle, 625.0504; Ans. sq. ft., 30,628.550 (Ibs.). I also submit plan drawing made and sizing up.—D. W. COGGER.

12 Market street.

R. I. Girl Solves It.

Problem Editor—Mr. Browne's cow could graze over 30,803.50 sq. ft. of land.

PLEDGES SUPPORT TO LABOR

Thomas L. Hisgen Denounces Government by Injunction and Favors Eight-Hour Day.

CHEERED IN SOMERVILLE

While Whitney and Bartlett, the candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor, are invading the western part of the State, Thomas L. Hisgen of Springfield, candidate for the Independence League nomination, continues his successful campaign in the East.

Following his notable appearance before the Ward 23 Wage Earners' Club at Dilsdale Tuesday evening, Mr. Hisgen last night conferred with the Somerville city Committee of the Independence League, at No. 48 Highland avenue, Somerville. He was given an enthusiastic reception.

The situation in Somerville was thoroughly discussed at the conference, and the prospects set forth as being very bright for the League. All of the members of the city committee declared that there was an overwhelming sentiment in favor of a third party, both among business men and laboring men.

Young Men to Front.

The committee met for the purpose not only of meeting Mr. Hisgen, but also to reorganize. The old committee felt that it had served long enough and done sufficient strenuous work to the last campaign, when the League was not an organized party, and was determined now that some of the younger and more active workers should take a leading part in the coming campaign.

Officers were elected as follows: Chairman, George E. Goodin, 2d; secretary, Charles E. Butterworth; treasurer, William E. Dunning. Mr. Dunning is deputy organizer of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners. It was reported that the Independence League in Somerville would send its full quota of thirty-three delegates to all conventions except that for the nomination of Representatives. The delegates are apportioned, according to wards, as follows: Ward 1, 4; Ward 2, 6; Ward 3, 3; Ward 4, 4; Ward 5, 5; Ward 6, 6; Ward 7, 5.

Why He Seeks Nomination.

Mr. Hisgen was listened to attentively while he explained why he sought the nomination of the Independence League for Governor. His speech throughout was enthusiastically cheered. "Not because of the honor attached to it do I seek this high office," he declared, "but to enforce certain principles. If my candidacy did nothing more than to make either of the other two parties incorporate these principles in their platforms, I would be satisfied that my object had been attained.

"The speaker said particular attention to government by injunction. 'I am in favor of giving every man a trial by jury,' he said. 'No member of any labor organization should be placed in jail without any process of law whatever because he has talked peaceably with a fellow-citizen in an endeavor to persuade him to work for better conditions. I have known of a man being kept in jail for four or five months, being denied any appeal whatever, and I decidedly against that proposition and so is the Independence League. That is one of the planks in the platform of the Independence League and he its standard bearer will make that one of of the prominent issues.

For Trials by Jury.

"Taking an impartial view of it, we have always boasted of our fairness in this country of a trial by jury. We think that every man is entitled to it, and he is not to be thrown into jail unless he is convicted through the courts. A lawyer told me to-day that they could issue an injunction forbidding a man crossing a bridge here. But that man would be granted a trial by jury. However, the minute that a laboring man, in the course of his work or living, violates an injunction, he is thrown into jail without a jury trial.

"And in connection I would like to say that, I believe in the principle of eight hours for sleep, eight hours for work and eight hours for what you will. The sooner they do it the better the wage the better the home.

"For many years I started in at 7:30 and worked until 9 at night. I always thought that the injunction was wrong, and I never carried out that idea although our employing of help. I am glad to see that these conditions are being improved right along. I do not believe it will be a great while before we will have the eight-hour system generally.

"We are fast getting the idea that there is one law for the rich and one for the poor. For instance, we have had injunctions issued against the employment of child labor."

Hits the Merger.

Mr. Hisgen presented several arguments in support of his emphatic opposition to the merger of the Boston & Maine railroad with the New York, New Haven & Hartford. The Boston & Maine, he declared, was at present subsidizing steamers at a less cost per mile than the New Haven, a much larger road.

"You can ride at present," he said, "from Springfield to Greenfield—a distance of fifty miles—for fifty cents on the Boston & Maine. The New Haven road wants the trolley lines between these two points. Consequently, if they gain possession of the Boston & Maine road, the New Haven company will advance the rates on both the steam and trolley lines. The New Haven company has a charter to Connecticut which allows them to do almost anything. They can go into even the laundering business or the newspaper business, if they chose.

"If allowed to do in Massachusetts what they do in Connecticut, they can deliver freight from door to door and drive the truckmen out of business. They supply want to own everything.

"The people of Massachusetts wanted no other evidence of the disastrous results of a merger of these two railroads, to call attention to the recent consolidation of two steamship companies along the coast, which has resulted in a twenty-five per cent increase in freight rates."

Oil Trust Oppression.

Mr. Hisgen declared that he would be in politics until the anti-discrimination bill for which he was sponsor, becomes a law. The Standard Oil Company, he said, is charging excessive prices in Eastern Massachusetts as compared to cost on at empty prices in the western part of the State owing to the fact that the Independent Oil Company in that section.

Mr. Hisgen addresses a mass meeting of wage earners to-night in Weavers' Hall, New Bedford.

STOPS RUNAWAY AND SAVES GIRL

Matthew McDermott of No. 23 Dexter street, Dorchester, rushed into the midst of crowded Eliot street, at the risk of his life, last evening and stopped a horse attached to a light runabout in which was seated Miss Alice Kingston, 16, of Chestnut street. The animal had run for nearly a mile with the terrified girl clinging to the reins.

"STUMPED."

There are sixty naval cadets on board the ship, many of whom come from the most illustrious families of Sweden.

The Fylgia is the handsomest as well as the newest vessel of the Swedish navy. She carries twenty-two guns and has a crew of 328 men. A temporary outside kitchen is being erected by Mrs. E. J. Berwind for the better accommodation of her guests, and the big piazza has been covered in for the ball supper tables.

SOBBING BOY TELLS HOW HE SHOT COMRADE DEAD

"It Was an Accident, an Awful Accident," Says Leslie Hansen, as He Weeps for Chum's Death.

Declaring that the terrible affair was an accident, his voice faltering with grief, his eyes filling with tears, Leslie Hansen, thirteen years of age, son of Ommun Hansen of No. 44 Waverly avenue, Everett, told to-day for the BOSTON AMERICAN the story of the shooting of Danny Walhaum, 12 years old, son of Frederick Walhaum of No. 194 Chestnut street, Everett, who was killed yesterday afternoon while following a crowd of boys into the sand pits of Malden.

By Leslie Hansen.

Danny Walhaum was a friend of mine. We often played together and I can't tell you how I feel to-day when I know that he is dead and that it must have been I who shot him. It was all an accident—an awful accident. I'll never touch a rifle again. I wish I had minded my parents and then Danny would have been well to-day and I would have been happy.

All I know about it is this: I left home a little bit after noon yesterday and met a lot of the fellows at Glendale square. There were Louis Bruno, Warren Bennett, Grant Holt and Charley Long there.

Then Bruno Bennett wanted to get some to fix his bicycle and I had a dime and a roll and then he loaned me his rifle. It was a .22 caliber. I needed cartridges, for he didn't have any, and as I was afraid to take the gun home with me I left it in the entry of his house and went home for some money to buy bullets with.

I got the loan of the rifle for the tape and Warren and I arranged to meet after we had bought bullets and then we and some of the other fellows would go down to the sand pits and shoot green leapers, a kind of frog you find there.

Man Bought Cartridges.

I got fifteen cents at home and with Johnny Linden went down to Everett square to P. C. Week's harware store. I have a penalty any cartridges in the store and I got a young fellow to try, but he couldn't either. Then John Linden got a big man to go in and get fifty cartridges, a twenty-two-caliber short kings and I gave the fellow two, for he said he had a revolver and could use them.

Then we hunted up the gang and found them at Charley Long's house. I went back for a rifle in Warren Bennet's home and came back to where the boys were.

There were Charley Long, Joe Long, Harry Bender, William Barrigan, Grant Holt and I in the crowd. We were there when Danny Walhaum came along and wanted to go with us. Warren said, "Let him come along, we have enough in our gang."

Then we said we didn't want him, and we started off for the sand pits, going through Regge's fields. Edith next we loaded the guns, and I shot at a fence with the rifle. About this time Danny Walhaum appeared again. He said he wanted to go with us. We told him we didn't want him. He said he was going, and then we told him to go on without about that we would not go with him.

"Fired Rifle to Scare Him."

Then Danny ran over Page's field, and we fired the rifle in the air to scare him. I fired it, and I think that Warren Bennett did too, once. Then we all followed across Page's field to Bryant street. We saw Danny again coming toward us, and we climbed up the bank at Bryant street, and I fired the rifle in the air again to scare him.

Then Danny ran away and we began to shoot at the green leapers, and we chased John Linden for a time. I was shooting at a bird, but the other boys could see with their air rifles. We were chasing Johnny when we ran across a fellow named Rooney. I thought he was Danny Walhaum, and I cocked the rifle and snapped it, but it was not loaded then.

We kept on running around and shooting and then I saw Danny over by a big tree. It must have been after 2 o'clock then. John Linden said: "Fire the rifle at him." The other boys were behind us shooting at frogs.

Fired High in the Air.

Then I fired the gun, pointing it high in the air, so as to shoot over Danny's head. Long said: "Oh, you hit the tree." Just as I fired Danny Walhaum ran into the bushes, going home, I thought.

Then we boys shot at the green leapers again and the tin cans in the water, until someone saw a crowd running to the bushes where Danny had gone.

We ran over there and I saw Danny Walhaum lying on the side on the ground and blood coming from a wound in the back of his head.

I don't feel that I must have shot him when I was trying to scare him by shooting over his head. I sent Grant Holt and Willie Barrigan to Danny's home to tell his mother he was shot.

When a street car conductor came and after he saw Danny, he went and telephoned the police. Then Danny's mother came with Sergeant Palmer in a carriage. A woman told me to go home, and she let Mrs. Anderson, guess the woman was the first to reach Danny's side when he fell.

I went home and last night the police had me go to the station to tell them everything. I was there from 6 o'clock until a quarter of eleven. To-day the inspector of Malden came and I went with him to where Danny was shot. He said I must have stood 175 feet from where Danny was. I was in Malden, Everett to the line. Then we went with Sergeant Palmer to see Mrs. Anderson. Then we came to Broadway, where the policemen gave me my carfare to go home and told me to be a good boy and I'm going to try to be one.

To Send Flowers to Funeral.

I am going to send some flowers to the funeral of Danny. I feel awful bad. I can't tell you how bad. But I know I didn't go to do it. I never had anything against Danny. We were good friends and were playing together the first of this week. We didn't want him in our gang yesterday. That was all and I just fired over his head to scare him.

I didn't fire three times at him in succession at all. It was a long time between the different times, just as I have told you.

ADMITS PLOT TO MURDER MAN FOR INSURANCE

George Carnie Confesses Design Upon Brother-in-Law's Life for Sake of Money.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—An admission of guilt was to-day wrung from George Carnie, who, with his sister, was held in the Police Court at Port Richmond, S. I., last night in the alleged plot to kill their brother-in-law, Frederick Hulz, according to District Attorney Kenney. Carnie is said to have denied, however, that his sister Marion had any connection with the supposed plot.

The Carnies are to be examined to-morrow.

Anxiety to secure $1,500 insurance on Hulz's life, the police claim, was the motive for planning the murder. Marion Carnie was the beneficiary of the policies. Hulz, who had lived with the brother and sister since his wife, their sister, died, is said to have recently informed them he expected to marry again.

According to the police, it was planned to kill Hulz, and two men were hired to carry out the plan. One backed out and betrayed the plan to detectives. The plot came to a head when Carnie invited Hulz last night, as Hulz was returning from Jersey after a call on his sweetheart. Carnie and Hulz are now both without bail in Port Richmond.

STORM KILLS TOURIST.

10,000 ACRES DEVASTATED BY CAPE COD FIRE

Woodland and Cranberry Bogs Laid Waste and Beach Resorts Imperilled.

SUMMER VISITOR BLAMED

BOURNE, Aug. 22.—Cape Cod's disastrous fire has been subdued after burning sixty-two hours, threatening nine villages, severely injuring one man, causing the sickness of another through exhaustion and burning over 100 square miles containing 10,000 acres of valuable wood land.

Scores of cranberry bogs are ruined. Much of the game in the burned district has been killed.

The Selectmen are now determined to discover the person who set the fire.

That the fire was not the work of boys lighting potatoes, most of older and more responsible people who ought to have known the consequences of such an act is the belief of David D. Nye, chairman, and B. F. Bamne and George E. Bourne, associate members of the Board of Selectmen. They propose to have the guilty ones apprehended and the responsibility placed where it belongs.

It is felt that if those guilty of setting the fire should be brought to book, a certain Summer colony on the shores of Buzzard's Bay would receive the benefit of a visit from the officers, and it is the determination that it shall be done.

Fire Fighters at War.

Feeling is also running high against an inhabitant of the village of Sagamore, who, at the head of twenty-five men, is said to have disobeyed the orders of Fire Warden George E. Perry and started a back fire yesterday afternoon on the common between here and the town, which, getting away from them, became a head fire, and came within a few rods of the new high school building and the homes of Miss Arabell Parker, Moses Haggett, Seth Hill, Henry Swift, Clarence Eldridge and the Widow Feller.

The fire was said to have been under complete control at noon yesterday, and Warden Perry left the place to get a little needed sleep, leaving strict orders to set no more back fires until his return if the wind remained in the same quarter. This he said, made the remark that the fire was traveling toward Sagamore, and that he didn't propose to see that village go and Bourne village saved, and therefore, with the assistance of his men, he built a back fire.

Douglas Home Escapes.

The result was most disastrous, for it got beyond their control and developed into a head fire, requiring the efforts of the entire town-people during the remainder of the day and night to save the village.

The fire started Monday noon at Flax Pond in the rear of the Summer colony known as Catamount, on the shores of Buzzard's Bay, and fanned by a southerly wind, traveled rapidly up the Sound in the rear of Wenaumet, Pocasset, Monument Beach and the Point Independence of former Governor William L. Douglas on to Bourne village.

A shift in the wind Monday night saved this village, but sent terror to the hearts of the people in the towns down the Cape in the direction of Sandwich, for the fire had developed into three separate ones, and Sagamore and Sandwich were threatened as well as Bourne.

All day Tuesday the inhabitants of those villages, re-enforced by 500 men from the works of the Keith Car Manufacturing Company at Sagamore, made the fight of their lives. Men were stationed twenty-five feet apart on the county road from this place to the edge of Sandwich to hold the fire on the west side of the road at all hazards.

Fire and church bells were rung in all the villages and the cries of fire could be not in the danger zone, asking for all the help that could be secured at any price.

Women Give Assistance.

The streets were filled with smoke and falling sparks, ladders were raised against the houses, roofs were drenched and tubs, pails and all available receptacles that would hold water were filled and placed in the yards.

All work was suspended. Even the women folks assisted in the work of salvation by cooking and feeding the men engaged in saving the homes.

At Bennison's Corner, Sandwich, the local department, consisting of a hand tub, hose reel and hauling the men engaged and fought the fire in the orchard of William Bennison. Fire Warden Perry Higgins, in charge, sent a gang of men up the Pocasset road to aid the men in the summer colony in holding the flames in check on the opposite side of the road. Their work was not completed until Wednesday morning, but the danger was saved.

The fire then took another turn for Sagamore along the county road, and doubtless do its tracks.

It just missed the homes of Calvin T. Ellis and Lucie M. Leuhos, a summer resident, and raced along parallel with the highway, made a stand on the hill overlooking the home of Mrs. Sarah C. Schuster.

Beach Houses in Danger.

Wednesday noon the wind freshened quite perceptibly, the fire ran to fill along the lines of the head fires were fanned into life and in a short time this village was again the common center. Back fires were built between here and Sagamore, near the tracks of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., and until 4 o'clock this morning men were fighting with those fires. They were also sent into the woods on the old Monument Sandwich road to back fire and a gang under the direction of Warden George E. Perry went to Pocasset, where it was trying to get into the road. In the rear of Monument Beach the fire took fresh life, and for a time it looked as though the settlement might be wiped out, for the second time within a year, by fire. It was only last season that the greater portion of this place was completely destroyed by fire, and the flames threatened in a wholesome respect for it.

The fire at one time threatened the farm of the Joseph Jefferson estate, on the road between Bourne and Sagamore. Its men were used by the former actor for fishing. At Bennison's Corner, Sandwich, the fire came down to the road opposite the Bay View Cemetery, in which lay the remains of the veteran actor.

The only serious injuries sustained during the progress of the fire were those suffered by Fire Warden Fred F. Hamps, who was overcome with the heat yesterday and fell upon a sharp stick. He was removed to his home in an unconscious state and is now under the care of a physician.

HUGE WARSHIP ORDER GIVEN

LONDON, Aug. 22.—The Chronicle says that a foreign government, supposed to be Russia, has awarded to a North of England firm of shipbuilders, believed to be the Armstrongs, a contract for several battleships, cruisers and gunboats.

A record insurance of nearly $35,000,000 has been effected on the building and launching risks, the policies covering two years.

Helen Gould Accused by Chauffeur of Spiriting Him Away from Paris to Suppress Testimony for Boni

Miss Helen Gould, who figures in latest divorce sensation of her sister Anna's case.

Declares He Acted as Spy for Count De Castellane and Secured Evidence.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Count Boni De Castellane's favorite chauffeur, Louis Dussaus, is stranded in this city. He declares his fall from the position of motor king of the boulevardes is due to a trick played upon him to get him out of France because he would have been a valuable witness on the Count's side in the recent divorce suit.

On the eve of the suit, Dussaus declared yesterday, the Countess and her attorney, Maitre Kelly, had him transferred to the service of the Countess's sister, Miss Helen Gould. That was last Fall. Within the last few days he has been dropped from the position, and now he is far from his patron and friends.

The odd part of Dussaus's experience is that he never so much as touched a steering wheel for Miss Helen Gould. She was abroad with her car when he was engaged as her chauffeur, but he was sent direct to New York. In fact, he says, he has only seen her two or three times.

Paid Without Work.

Yet, strangely, he has been receiving her checks for $90 a month with unfailing regularity. So long as they arrived he was able to support himself and his wife here. But now they have been stopped. Dusses has nothing. He said yesterday that his wife had secured a place in a restaurant kitchen to help get the family finances. It appeared strange to him that the stoppage of his salary occurred just about the same time as Miss Helen Gould, his nominal employer, returned from Europe.

"It was to get me out of the way that I was sent here," Dussaus exclaimed, with a shrug of his shoulders and a sweep of his eloquent hands.

"They found out I had been doing some secret service work for the Count. So to Mlle. Gould I was sent, Lady whom I know not and whose nature I have never driven. But they will see! I shall go back to Monsieur the Count. He wishes me back. He will appeal to the court to me as witness he will win."

The handsome Louis at this point exhibited a cablegram from Boni, which, translated, read thus:

A Letter from Boni.

"Received letter. Although surprised, accept good offices. Will help you. Write what you have to say to me.

"COUNT."

This, Dussaus declared, was in response to a letter he sent to his former employer recently, explaining how he had been discharged from his American sinecure, and how he longed to go back to that dear Paris and that beloved Boni.

Then the chauffeur displayed the letter dissuading him from Miss Gould's service. It was signed by one of Miss Gould's secretaries, and ran in this wise:

Letter of Dismissal.

"379 Fifth avenue, Aug. 1, 1907.

"Dear Sir—Miss Gould informs me that she does not intend to bring her automobile back to America with her and so she will not need your services any longer. I am sending you herewith enclosed check No. 634 and $180 made out to your order by May Campbell. This amount covers your wages for July just past, and the month of August in advance.

"Miss Gould wishes me to state at your earliest convenience and remove everything that is there belonging to you. Miss Gould has ordered the place put in charge of Mrs. Hall, the housekeeper at Georgian Bay, and, after the men go up to the country and the building is closed, it will be impossible to make entrance there in all late in the Autumn, if not the Winter.

Employed for Long Time as Chauffeur by Miss Gould, but Never Touched Machine.

I will ask you to give the coachman, William Tolford, the holiday of the day the door which is in your possession. Hoping you will procure a good position without delay, and wishing you every other success, I am, truly,

"JULIA M. LIPPMANN."

When an officer was sent by the police-stricken cashier about to confess, having been drawn back to the scene of the crime by that mysterious something that makes the criminal return to the job and land in the hands of justice which faltereth not?

"I snapped the cuffs on the short toe quick last night," says Blaney, "and the top hinge fell off. Was the safe conjured up to send a man over to mend that hinge."

And the cops turned right straight around and went right out again.

PEASANTS AND TROOPS CLASH

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Aug. 22.—A bloody encounter between peasants and Hungarian soldiers, resulting in scores of casualties have occurred at Mostar, the chief town of the province of Herzegovina.

Soldiers invaded the town plundering the homes of the peasants. The latter armed themselves with scythes, pitchforks, old guns and swords and attacked the soldiers camp at night. A fierce fight followed before the peasants were routed. Several seven persons were killed and nearly fifty were injured.

GOVERNMENT LAX IN DEPORTING JAPANESE

EL PASO, Aug. 22.—Western railroads are protesting against the lax enforcement the government makes for the deportation of Japanese who are captured after they have smuggled into the country from Canadian ports. The government provides the transportation, subsistence, and leaves it to the railroads to see that they leave the country. As a result, the smuggled men leave the train where they feel like it and the aim of the deportation law is defeated.

PEACE CUPOLA FALLS.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 22.—The cupola on the site of the Carnegie Peace Palace, which was erected over the platform upon which the singers stood when the foundation stone was laid July 20, collapsed and one workman was killed and four injured.

COPS CLEAN UP ONE JOB IN JIG TIME

"Strong-Arm Jimmie" Blazes Trail All Too Easy for Sleuths.

CASHIER ON DECK SOME

One of the most daring burglaries ever committed in this city almost took place to-day in the office of the F. W. Webb Manufacturing Company, at No. 56 Elm street, right in the heart of the city.

The police were on the spot so promptly and ran down every clue with such preternatural sagacity that the burglars would infallibly have been captured if they had existed. The police work, like the surgeon's operation, was entirely successful. Only, in the surgeon's case, the victim carefully died. In this instance, the burglars neglected to exist.

About dawn to-day Watchman Frank Lannigan at the Webb place found that the safe on the first floor in an outer office had its door hanging by one hinge. The safe was empty.

"Burglars!" said Lannigan, and he hopped to a telephone and called up Police Headquarters. Corporal Square got the word from headquarters. Lieutenant Hyland sent three cops on the run down to the Webb place.

Cops Hunt 'Em.

It was remembered that two weeks ago an automatic alarm came in from Webb's. No evidence of fire was discovered, and it was suspected that burglars, tampering with the signal system, had been scared away when the alarm came in.

"This time," thought Lieutenant Hyland, "we'll get 'em."

So the trusty cops went down and solemnly viewed the ravaged safe and the immediate surroundings. They reasoned accurately that if the safe had been robbed that robbers had done it, and that if the robbers were not there they must be somewhere else.

At this exciting juncture the tip came into the reporters' room at headquarters, and every headquarters man proceeded to Webb's to be on the job while there was something doing. The reporters found the cops scattered about the fire escapes, scanning the roof, looking for burglars and wondering as if they would find 'em.

The reporters were informed, strictly on the quiet—"and don't give me away in this know"—that the burglar's name was probably the work of "Strong-Arm Jimmie," the notorious yegg who opens safes without the aid of dynamite or a pair of jacks or any of the other well-known implements. The amount of loot was estimated from $25 to $5,000, according to the extravagancy of the informant. The cops allowed it was a slick job. The reporters took copious notes.

Cashier—of Course.

The fact that a little two-wheel truck was found in the private office of Mr. Webb added to the mystery. It was concluded the yeggs meant to wheel the safe to a convenient spot in the building and then blow it open—the safe, not the building, but decided to chance the door instead.

At 9 a. m. Cashier J. E. Blaney came down. There was a simultaneous rush to tell Blaney all about it.

"I did it," said Blaney calmly. The cops gasped. Was the conscience-stricken cashier about to confess, having been drawn back to the scene of the crime by that mysterious something that makes the criminal return to the job and land in the hands of justice which faltereth not?

"I snapped the cuffs on the short toe quick last night," says Blaney, "and the top hinge fell off. Was the safe conjured up to send a man over to mend that hinge."

"WE'LL FIGHT IT OUT AND WIN"--PRESIDENT SMALL

Striking Telegraphers Declare Companies Will Be Defeated Unless Desired Concessions Are Made.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—"We will fight it out along these lines if it takes all Winter," said President Small of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union today. "We are able to hold out until December with our present resources and can increase our assets by that time to fight the companies for an indefinite period."

The general telegraphic business of the country is in a chaotic state, but each business as is absolutely being carried on is done over leased wires manned by union men. The other business is shaking itself down to emergency conditions, under which, according to the belief of the operators, it cannot be conducted without irreparable loss. The operators believe that if the business of the country will accept these emergency conditions, the strike will be won.

The railway telegraphers to-day renewed their proffer of assistance and increased their contributions to the defense fund of the union.

NEILL TO REFER STRIKE SETTLEMENT TO THE PRESIDENT

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The striking telegraphers are encouraged to-day by a well-founded report from Washington that Commissioner of Labor Neill will shortly lay before President Roosevelt all the information he has collected regarding the telegraph situation.

The commissioner has been in communication with the heads of the telegraph companies. In Washington he met representatives of the strikers. They do not believe he would devote so much time to the matter without a definite purpose.

At his office there was no denial of the report that he shortly will forward a communication to the strike leaders and the companies.

The strike in New York appears to have developed into a test of endurance. The companies have rounded up enough men to make a showing, although the service is still crippled and messages are accepted subject to indefinite delay.

The companies are suffering enormously from the loss of business due to the lack of public confidence in the service, but they would rather stand the loss for a few weeks than give in to the union.

That the ranks of the strikers have not been broken was proven from the lips of Superintendent Brooks of the Western Union.

He made a point of telling how a single union man had returned to work, tearing up his union card and throwing it on the floor of the office. This is the first union man to go back, and the strikers already have learned his identity.

On the other hand, the telegraphers claimed eight strike breakers from the two offices yesterday. Chief Strategist Russell declares there is much uneasiness in the Western Union office since young Belnken went insane on Tuesday.

No Soldiers for Companies.

"The strike breakers have been kept under restraint so long and overworked to such a degree," he says, "that they are afraid the same fate will overtake them. The doctors say Belnken will have to go to the Manhattan State Hospital for the insane, and that it will be three months before he recovers. We will do what we can for him."

Representatives of the Postal company were in Washington trying to persuade General Bell, chief of staff, to detail a guard of soldiers at the station at Ash-Fork, Arizona, which was attacked on Monday night. They were unsuccessful.

General Bell explained he could not detail the troops without a request from the Government.

To Prove Illegal Combination.

Assistant General Manager Barclay of the Western Union formally denied he ever had said or intimated that the young women operators discharged just before the strike had been dismissed for drunkenness.

The strikers will bend their efforts in the next few days to proving that an illegal combination exists between the Western Union and the Postal. That there is a combination and a working agreement was demonstrated decisively in the AMERICAN some weeks ago.

"We propose to show," said Mr. Russell "that the recent raise in telegraph tariff was unnecessary and that the companies are profiting enormously. The ten per cent raise in salaries in March was only a drop in the bucket.

Rose Pastor Stokes with Men.

"The companies do an average of $150,-000 business a year on each wire between Chicago and New York, yet they lease a wire to a private concern for $2,000 at a profit."

The strikers received the official encouragement of the order of Railway Telegraphers yesterday. Second National Vice-President Pierson addressed their mass meeting at the Manhattan Lyceum in East Fourth.

He pledged the support of 40,000 railroad operators in the present struggle. He said he assured of pressure would make them handle commercial messages. He said he had discovered evidence that the telegraph companies were sending many messages by express.

Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes, who was to have addressed the women strikers, was unable to attend the meeting. She is said to be working through her wealthy friends for arbitration of the strike.

HUB COMPANIES SIGN AGREEMENT FOR LEASED WIRE

A number of Boston firms, employing about forty telegraphers, on leased wires, have signed the union agreement giving the operators the conditions demanded.

It is said that much dissatisfaction is manifested by the non-union operators who are filling the places of the strikers for the Western Union Company. They have been compelled to work overtime, and, it is held, were assured of extra pay for time accommodating the company. When payday came around and they received nothing but their ordinary wages there was almost an outbreak.

FOURTH STRIKE IN FITCHBURG

FITCHBURG, Aug. 22.—The sawmakers' strike in Chicago has resulted in a sympathetic movement in the city and twenty-eight sawmakers employed by the Simonds Manufacturing Company have quit work. Only three men are left in the immense plant, two of them being foremen.

This makes four large strikes now existing in this city, the machinists, plumbers, painters and sawmakers.

HUNT $250,000 MAIL ROBBER

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—George Bell, who was arrested three years ago for the theft of a registered mail pouch at Denver, Col., and escaped on two occasions from the postoffice inspectors, was credited by the government secret service agents with being the man who engineered the theft of the mail pouches said to contain $250,000 on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad between Denver and Oxford, Neb., Friday night.

Scores of secret service agents and postoffice inspectors of Kansas City, Omaha and Denver are on the hunt for Bell, who was last seen in Omaha. He was reported to be the cleverest mail pouch robber that ever had a beat with the government officials.

FAVORS GIVEN THE OIL TRUST

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Independent producers have complained to the Navy Department that they will not be enabled in many cases to submit bids for supplying oil owing to the fact that the specifications are so stringent that they are not able to compete with the Standard Oil Company.

The proposals are to be opened next Tuesday in the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts.

Secretary Metcalf has adopted a new policy in the matter of purchasing oil for the navy, and the independents assert that it is to their disadvantage and gives the Standard Oil practically a monopoly of the bids.

HELD IN SECOND DEGREE MURDER

FITCHBURG, Aug. 22.—The Grand Jury has returned an indictment of murder in the second degree against Frank W. Phipps of Shrewsbury, charged with killing Charles L. Burnay at the Lily House in Shrewsbury last June. There was much mystery connected with the tragedy, as a coroner's jury at first was held for the crime was subsequently released.

LAND BILL DROPPED

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Because of the drastic amendments which the House of Lords threatens to make in the Scottish small land owners' bill, which was attacked by Lord Rosebery in a brilliant speech, August 15, the government has decided to abandon the measure.

MILL MEN AND WEAVERS MEET

FALL RIVER, Aug. 22.—It is fully expected that at the coming conference, which will probably be held next Tuesday, between the members of the Weavers' Union and the executive committee of the Fall River Manufacturers' Association, a final agreement as to the standard length of cut will be reached.

At the conclusion of yesterday's conference, which lasted for three hours, it was announced that there had been a friendly and satisfactory session, in which the standard length of cut was the principal topic discussed in detail and from every angle, but that there had been no papers or agreements ready for signature, and consequently there would have to be another conference some day next week.

8 MEN FINED FOR WALKING ON TRACK

Charged with walking on the railroad track yesterday, George Smith, Thomas Leary, William Petrie, Nicholas Sattrarkas, George Roonis, Peter Powers, Peter Kelley and James Jefferson were each fined $5 by Judge Greene in the Dedham District Court to-day. The men, who live in Lowell, were taking a short cut to the Readville race track when arrested.

TO EXPEND $458,000,000.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 22.—The minister of railways has submitted to the council of ministers a scheme for improvements in the State railways for 1907-1912. The total estimated expense is $458,-000,000.

Summer Fruits, and How to Eat Them

EAT only sound, ripe fruit. Unripe interferes with the digestion of the starch. fruit is indigestible. Overripe of Dates, figs or prunes supply all the sweet- pretty boiled fruit is poisonous owing to mold from the bacteria it contains.

Fruit is most wholesome eaten tough fruit skins raw. It is safer not to by itself, at the beginning of a meal or as cause sickness than raw fruit. Fruit not Sweet fruits, such as bananas, dates and quite ripe and fruit best a little too long figs, are best with breakfast cereals and may be made safe to eat by thorough other starchy foods; acid fruits sometimes cooking.

Eat moderately of raw fruit, especially in hot weather. Do not imagine because it is watery and comparatively innutritious that you can safely eat it in unlimited quantities.

The Ideal Servant Is in Denmark

IN Denmark few housewives have trouble with their servants. A system has been perfected which guarantees a housewife honest and good servants, as well as independence and fair treatment to those employed.

When a young woman obtains employment she goes to a police station and gets a book which testifies to her good character and in which is entered the name of the woman into whose service she enters. Without this book of character a servant cannot secure employment. This book she gives to her new mistress. In return she gets a key of the front door of the house.

The servant enjoys absolute independence. Should she decide to leave the service, she is required to give her mistress two weeks' notice. When she leaves she receives her book, and reports all at the police station.

Should several weeks or days elapse before she again secures employment, she is required to give an account of herself, and tell where she has been, at the police station. If a woman is discovered to have led an improper life, the certification of good character is refused.

How to Transform a Carrot Into a Beautiful Plant for the Home

SOME genius has discovered that the every-day carrot of the common or bolted-dinner variety may easily be transformed into an attractive hanging plant for the home.

The process is extremely simple and so prettily is the finished product when the tuber begins to throw out its shoots that the experiment is well worth trying.

The accompanying illustrations show the process of making one of these attractive ornaments, which resemble somewhat the Japanese "air-plants" which are popular for dining room ornaments.

First of all the smaller end of the carrot, the tapering root, is cut off, as shown in the upper picture.

Then the inside of the carrot must be scooped out, leaving a cup about one-half to three-quarters inches thick, and digging to within about the same distance from the head of the carrot, from which grows the carrot "top."

This done, the shell-like cup is boyed

with it gimlet so that four strings may be inserted. This makes the hanger by which the carrot may be suspended in a light place.

If the carrot, thus treated, is hung up and supplied with water, it will throw out graceful shoots in the manner shown in the lower photograph. The carrot requires little care, save that it must not be allowed to become dry.

The shoots grow rapidly and luxuriantly and are of a beautiful yellow-ish green hue—bright and attractive for almost any room in the house.

Helpers for Housewives

COMMON kitchen salt is an excellent occasional dentifrice, as it whitens and preserves the teeth, removes tartar and hardens the gums. It should not, however, be used every day, as it has a tendency, like all gritty substances, to injure the enamel if used constantly.

After using a bowl of starch do not throw away what is left. Put the basin on one side, and when the starch has dropped to the bottom pour off the water. Place the basin in the oven for five minutes. The starch will be found in hard cakes and can be put away ready for use another day.

Expert Advice on Health and Beauty

THE woman who would be beautiful must not work unceasingly without some time for rest. Fatigue will take all the beauty out of a Venus.

If you work for your living, and there is no reason why the girl who does this should not be as beautiful as her more opulent sister, take some time after you return home when you really relax, devilish your muscles and don't care whether school keeps or not.

If you never a look all day you must, after taking this short rest, exercise by walking or taking a system of exercises, such as you prefer, that will bring all the blood to the surface and give you a glow.

If you have been on your feet all day get down on the floor on your elbows and knees as the Indian woman rests; close your eyes, drop your head between your arms and remain in this position until the strain on the internal organs has been relieved. In all these exercises the clothing must, of course, be loosened.

SORES ON FOREHEAD

DEAR PROFESSOR:

I am a girl of sixteen and for the last few months my forehead has been breaking out with little sores. I do not seem to be able to get rid of them. When they dry up and the scabs fall off they leave marks. Please tell me what to do for them. H. C.

THESE sores are probably due to some ill condition of your blood and you will need to consult a physician in regard to it. In the meanwhile, you may, by the use of peroxide, render them less formidable. Dab them on this repeatedly and use a cleansing cream instead of water on the face. The physician will put you on a diet and you must follow it strictly. Wipe off the cleansing cream with a piece of cheesecloth, wet in alcohol, which will take off all the dirt without the use of soap and water. Steam the face or give it a good scrubbing with hot water and cuticle soap once a week immediately cleeing the pores with a dash of cold water, into which a few drops of benzoin are planed.

WRINKLES BETWEEN EYES

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Kindly advise me how to get rid of wrinkles between the eyebrows.

ELSIE D.

MASSAGE the wrinkles well with a good skin food, using a rotary motion and pressing deeply on to the bone beneath. Do this night and morning, and at night wash off the cream with alcohol, stretch the skin smoothly and paste on a wrinkle plaster. Make the plaster by coating paper with the white of an egg and drying quickly in a warm oven.

TO STAIN EYELASHES

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you kindly tell me of something to darken the eyelashes and brows—something simple that is not expensive and that cannot be detected when used?

MISS.

POWDER one dram of gum arabic and one-half dram of India ink; then mix a drop at a time, four ounces of rose water, taking care that powder is thoroughly dissolved in as little as possible of the liquid, adding the rest afterward. Apply this to the lashes and brows with a very tiny camel's hair brush, being careful not to get any of it in the eye or on the skin, as it will injure the former and dye the latter. It is better to have a specialist dye the lashes once in a while, as she will dye one hair at a time and run no risk of over or under dyeing them and the stain will not be as apt to show as if done by yourself.

New School Teaches Women How to Shop

A NOVEL experiment in training girls to manage a home is to be made in England if the Educational Committee of the London County Council adopt a scheme which has been submitted to them.

The aim is to make the girls proficient in the domestic duties they would have to perform as the wives of artisans. In addition to washing, cooking and cleaning and the general management of the home on a systematic basis, they would be taught how to "shop" in the most economical way.

At the beginning of each week a certain sum would be set apart for rent, rates, clothing, insurance, traveling expenses and for providing a fund for a "rainy day." The remainder would be available for food and any little luxuries that might be possible.

It is said the training might be as practical as possible, it is necessary that the time occupied in attending to help in most homes should not be overlooked in the program of the experimental home. It is proposed each week, therefore, to undertake the care of a child belonging to a working class family in the neighborhood, and in this way the girls would gain further valuable experience.

Every piece of furniture and every utensil would have the price paid for it marked on it, so that the girls might have an idea of how much each article can be bought for.

Pointers for the Laundry

TO save the wear on the foot of wash boards when dressed, get a soft bristle scrub brush, gather it in your hands in a bunch, and work the bristles, with plenty of soap, lightly over it. This will remove dirt instantly.

An iron weighing seven pounds does better work by pussing it over clothes one with a firm, steady pressure than a lighter iron hurriedly passed over the clothes two or three times.

The Reservation of Mary Scott

THE two girls were traveling westward on the outside of an omnibus, in itself to Sybil a most fascinating mode of progression, and talking a good deal spasmodically.

"It's really too bad of you, Miss Scott," Sybil declared. "Now, to-day, if you will only consent, we shall be served in my own room. We shall be quite cozy and quiet, and I promise you that you shall not see a soul except my mother—whom I want you to know."

"You are very kind, indeed," Mary answered, "but I really must not begin visiting. I have only just time for a hurried lunch, and then I must look in at the office and get down to Bermondsey."

"You might just as well have that lunch with me," Sybil declared. "I'll send you anywhere you like afterward in the carriage."

"It is very kind of you," Mary answered, "but my visiting days are over. I am not a social person at all, you know. My role is overlooking, and nothing else."

"You are too young to talk like that," Sybil said.

"I am ten years older than you are," Mary rejoined pertly.

"You are twenty-eight," Sybil answered. "I think it is beautiful of you to be so devoted to this work, but I am quite sure a little change, a little gayety, would be wholesome."

"In another ten years I may think of it," Mary said. "Just now I have so much upon my hands that I dare not risk even the slightest distraction."

"In another ten years," Sybil said, "you will find it more difficult to enlarge your life than now. I can't believe that absorption in any one thing is natural at your age."

"We must all decide what is best for ourselves," Mary said, with a little air of disposition, remember."

"Nothing in the world," Sybil said, "would convince me that it is well for any girl to shut herself away from anything out of her life except work, however fine and useful that work may be. Now, you have admitted that except for Mr. Brooks and the people who have met him at your meetings at his work, you have no friends in London. I want you to count me a friend, Miss Scott. You have been very kind to me, and I have helped you delightfully once, and I can't you let me try to repay it a little?"

"You have only done my duties," Mary answered quietly. "I am supposed to know where helpers what to do, and you have picked up very quickly. And as for the rest, you have done nothing but I have no room for friendships in my life just now."

"I am sorry," Sybil answered, softly, for though Mary's tone had been cold enough, she had nevertheless for a single moment lifted the curtain, and Sybil understood in some vague manner that there were things behind into which she had no right to inquire.

The two girls parted at Trafalgar square, and Sybil, still in the fresh air, turned blithely westward on foot. In the Haymarket she came face to face with Brooks.

He greeted her with a delighted smile.

"You alone, and walking," he exclaimed. "What fortune. May I escort?"

"Of course," she answered. "You know that you have come from, I suppose?"

He glanced at her plain clothes and replied that the odor of disinfectant was stronger even than the perfume of the hundred and one shops which she had just bought from a woman in the street.

"Silly!" he exclaimed.

"Quite right. I had a card last evening, and was there at 9 o'clock this morning. I suppose I look a perfect wreck. I was dining at Hamilton House at 8 o'clock."

He looked toward her marvelling. Her cheeks were prettily flushed, and she walked with the delightful springiness of perfect health.

"I must say you never seen you look better," he answered.

"I'm so glad I've seen you, Mr. Brooks," she said. "I want to ask you something."

"Well?"

"About Miss Scott. She's been so good to me, and I like her awfully. We've just come up on the omnibus together."

"She's a wonderful woman," he said, with very first." Brooks said, slowly. "I really don't see how I could have done without her. She is such a capital organizer, too."

"I know all that of Sybil declared. "She's wonderful. I don't want, of course, to interfere with anything you are doing, but I'm frightfully afraid that I will find that I understood her a little bit."

Brooks laughed.

"She is a very reserved young woman," he said.

"You, but isn't there some reason for it?" Sybil continued, eagerly. "I have asked her lots of times to come and see me. She admits that she has no friends in London, and I wanted to have her come very much. You see, I thought she would be sure to like mother, and if she doesn't care for society, we might go to the theatre or the opera, and it would be a little change for her, wouldn't it?"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

ASKS MORE ICE CREAM; STARTS FURIOUS RIOT

Six in Danger of Death; Hundreds Hurt in Fight at Tammany Picnic.

8,000 IN THE BATTLE

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Half a dozen men are lying at the point of death to-day and a score of others are in hospitals or under the care of physicians as their homes as a result of the riot in which 8,000 men participated at the outing of the Tammany Jefferson Club of the Bronx at Claflin's Point, Hundreds of men are nursing broken heads and bruises received in the fight or at the hands of the police.

Starting in a quarrel because one of the picnickers demanded a second dish of ice cream, the fight assumed the proportions of a pitched battle, in which revolvers, Black Jacks, knives, clubs and bottles were used and continued for an hour.

Joseph Witzel Dangerously Hurt.

Joseph Witzel is probably the most dangerously injured. With his head cut open by a blow from a water pitcher and a probable fracture of the skull his condition is critical.

Frank Jordan, who is alleged to have started the riot by attacking Witzel, is also in a serious condition. He was beaten into unconsciousness. The dining hall, the scene of the affray, and the kitchen were demolished. A part of the kitchen was burned, showing where a stove was kicked over. Had not the flames been quickly extinguished, much more serious damage might have occurred.

During the fight four Sisters of Charity, Sister Mary, Sister Frances, Sister Sophia and Sister Anastasia, were caught in the hubbub and their clothes almost torn from their bodies. That they escaped serious injury is regarded as a miracle.

There were 2,500 men in the dining room when Jordan demanded that Witzel give him a second dish of ice cream. Witzel replied he would chase to wait. As the proprietor was walking away, it is charged, Jordan hurled a water pitcher at him. It struck Witzel in the head.

Instantly there was an uproar. Jordan was rushed into the kitchen, where his assailants sought the other diners to his assistance. They rushed the negro into the kitchen, closing the door. Then in the kitchen the battle raged. It spread to the dining room and out over the grove, and there seemed to know friends from enemies.

It was not long before the police arrived.

Their arrival was the signal for the shooting to begin and at least one officer was seriously injured.

Sisters Trampled Under Foot.

The four sisters of charity were in the dining room when the fight began. They dropped to their knees and began praying. Big, frenzied men in the throes of fury and they were forced down to the floor under the rush of the fighting men.

Their clothes were torn to shreds and they received painful bruises.

MUTINY GROWS IN SIBERIA

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 22.—Following a serious uprising of soldiers along the Manchurian border, the latest of a number of mutinies, General Pantenko today fled with the Czar a special report declaring that the Siberian troops are completely out of hand. In the event of a general revolt the general declares the soldiers will without doubt side with the revolutionists.

In the latest outbreak 400 mutineers barricaded themselves in their barracks and held at bay a battalion of sharp shooters. They finally opened fire on the sharp shooters, while eighteen mutineers were killed and thirty-five wounded.

Tired Society Women Can Learn Lesson from Hustling Little Actress

Charlotte Parry, now appearing at Keith's, in four character types.

These society women and actresses who are always complaining that they have not much to do,"—when all they do is to sip pink teas and don an evening gown or talk through some scene night after night—need to take lessons from Charlotte Parry, comely, magnetic, ambitious little woman who is appearing this week at Keith's theatre in a protean act all her own, and is creating unusual interest there.

"Work—begin to work early," says Miss Parry, "and work hard. Work, to make ten complete changes of character in nine minutes,—to be an old Irish woman, a Swedish work girl, a French soubrette, a pathetic girl-woman, and a hump-backed boy, and to be each character clearly and to every way from every other. But it is only by hard work that we make a success, and I do so want to make a success."

This little woman creates seven distinct characters from the four parts originally called "The Comstock Mystery." Discriminating critics who have watched her work declare that she is better than Henri De Vries or H. C. Roberts, because she creates the illusion of each distinct character better than do they. Certainly her act is the most wonderful of its kind ever seen here.

Miss Parry has taken unto herself many honors. She has declined the services of a press agent because, as she said, "I don't believe there's the stuff from which I want to know what people really think about me. Then I know whether I am good or bad."

"I love to do work like Mrs. Fiske or Ada Nazimova," she said this week. "I want to be a Bernhardt myself and going to give up working until I am a Bernhardt. I am willing to sacrifice everything to become successful as an actress."

REJOICE AT VINDICATION OF MRS. EDDY

Christian Scientists Joyous at Great Victory of Venerable Leader Over "Next Friends."

COMPETENCY IS PROVED

By Long Distance Telephone to the Boston American.

CONCORD, N. H., Aug. 22.—Christian Scientists all over the world are to-day rejoicing because Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy is incapable of managing her own affairs, pronounced by the "next friends," have admitted that they had no basis for the charges they had made against Mrs. Eddy, and that they are getting out of the action. Without explanation or apology, in a virtual confession that they were in the wrong for

That Mrs. Eddy is perfectly sane and competent, they also now believe. The withdrawal of the "next friends" from their court action gives added proof that they are satisfied that they could not substantiate it.

Although Mrs. Eddy's friends and advisers would have been more satisfied if the suit had been pushed to a conclusion and a court ruling obtained that she was competent, as would have been possible to prevent any attempt at further litigation after her death, legal points involved in the bringing of the suit has been a distinct advantage to Mrs. Eddy and her friends, because it demonstrated that religious views which differ from those of others cannot be regarded as evidence of insanity.

It has been known that counsel for the "next friends" had made several attempts to get the consent of General Streeter, counsel for Mrs. Eddy, to withdrawal of the suit without opposition on his part. This, however, they were unable to obtain, and their abandonment of the case yesterday—confessing, as it did, that their allegations were without a basis in fact—was vigorously opposed by him, because he wished a court decision to the effect that Mrs. Eddy was perfectly competent to manage her own affairs.

Vindication Complete.

In a statement by Alfred Farlow, head of the publication department of the Christian Science Church, and one of the Massachusetts defendants in the action brought by the "next friends," he says:

"After months of noisy boasting it now turns out that the so-called 'next friends' and their counsel are not able to produce a scintilla of evidence in favor of their allegations, but that they have made their charges without the slightest provocation, that they never have had he slightest evidence, but have manufactured their charges out of whole cloth. There could be no more complete and higher vindication of Mrs. Eddy."

L ROAD FORCES MEN TO BECOME LAW BREAKERS

Representative Conway Exposes Method Used by Company to Evade Responsibility.

That the Boston Elevated Railway company requires its conductors and motormen to sign printed slips reasserting they be allowed to work more than ten hours a day, in direct violation of the statutes of 1906, is the assertion of Representative John J. Conway of Ward 25, leading to the fight of the 10,000 "L" employees and others before the recess Committee on Labor to bring about nine-hour work-ing day for the men. He made the statement at the hearing before the Committee on Labor yesterday.

Proof of his statement he exhibited a printed slip bearing the name of the Boston Elevated Railway Company, the being worded in about contradictory that it is hard to believe that even the clever subterfuge to duck the responsibility for the long hours of the law.

Here is how the printed slip reads:

"I hereby make application for leave on such regular extra days as I may be required to work, for the purpose of my own understanding that I am to receive for such extra days two dollars and fifty cents ($2.50) per day, and for the time during which I am relieved from duty."

"It is the duty of the chairman and members of this committee that the Boston Elevated be made to file printed slips in which it imposes directly blameable for the defiance of the statute which provides that ten hours a day shall be the limit of their labor," declared Mr. Conway. He declared Representative Conway as he flashed the yellow slip before them.

"As you can see this slip permits the road to make their men work, not only the ten hours, but even more than that, if they have information, further which warrants the assertion that unless the employes sign the slips they cannot work for the company.

A High Time for Action.

"It is high time that the Massachusetts Legislature takes action to curtail the power of the corporations among our street car lines throughout the State and refuse to be a reform body needed," continued Mr. Conway.

"We have brought about an eight hour law for nearly every other craft of workingmen. It is time the oppressed street carmen got relief.

"Men have told me that motormen are known to go to sleep when they are kept working on the platform so long and if this condition of affairs exist among the men this committee can well afford to investigate the methods in vogue by the various street car companies.

"Motormen and conductors have the safety of the public in their hands. They are the first ones to be injured in case of accident and they should be given a chance to rest when their hours are up.

"As it is now, the men are compelled to work from twelve to nineteen hours a day to the company, although they do not get pay for the second time they are under control of their employers.

"According to ex-Representative Patrick J. Shields of Boston, formerly a conductor on the Boston "L," it frequently occurs that employees of the "L" are forced to go to work at 5 o'clock in the morning and work until 2 o'clock the following morning, and then compelled to report for duty again at 5:30.

He declared that the committee hearing the bill that there was no attempt on the part of the Boston Elevated to observe the law, and referred to the roll-call time cards, which he asked the committee to exact from the company.

Thomas J. Logue said, "would show how many of the employees are held waiting between runs, and how long they were held and be credited with only ten hours a day."

MINISTER AND YOUNG WIFE DIDN'T ELOPE

Return to Worried Husband After Several Days and Are Freely Forgiven.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The Rev. Antony S. Wheedon and Mrs. Charles W. Moffet, of No. 403 Bloomfield street, Hoboken, whose strange disappearance last Thursday resulted in the husband of the young woman sending out a general police alarm for the couple, returned to the Moffet home late last night and announced that there had not been an elopement.

The Rev. Mr. Wheedon, who, for eight years has been the spiritual adviser and business associate of young Moffet, came to it that there was an immediate reconciliation between the couple and announced that he would himself continue to make the Moffet apartment his home.

"The idea that we went away with the intention of eloping is preposterous," he said. "Mrs. Moffet has been away from her home, staying with friends, since last Thursday. She did this to discipline her husband. He was unkind to her."

Asked why he had disappeared at the same time and in a way that had made Mr. Moffet believe that they had gone away together, the minister declined to make any further statements, adding that he might have something to say to-day.

The fact that the young wife was welcomed back to the home of her husband did not create surprise in the neighborhood. Even after Moffet had requested the police to aid in the search for the couple and had publicly announced that she had been enticed away from home by the minister, he asserted that all would be forgiven if she would only come back. He even announced that he would be willing to share the cozy little apartment with the Rev. Mr. Wheedon.

GIRL FIGHTS BULL TO SAVE FATHER

BELMONT, N. H., Aug. 22.—John Gleason, a prominent farmer was gored to death by a bull on his farm. The bull was tied and Mr. Gleason was about to water it. The animal broke away and attacked him. His young daughter seized a hay rake and drove the infuriated bull away and succeeded in getting her father into the house, but he died in a few moments.

PREMIER MEETS KING.

MARIENBAD, Bohemia, Aug. 22.—M. Clemenceau, the French Premier, who is taking the cure at Carlsbad, lunched with King Edward. The Premier also saw Sir Edward Goschen, British ambassador to Austria-Hungary, who is in attendance on the King.

BIG THEATRE BENEFIT FOR TELEGRAPHERS

"King of Okoko," in "Green Bird," Was Once Manipulator of the Keys Himself.

Generally speaking, "benefits" are nothing but a hodge-podge of vaudeville acts which interest few in the audience, but which netting often to have watched her work declare that she is better than Henri De Vries or H. C. Roberts, because she creates the illusion of each distinct character better than do they. Certainly her act is the most wonderful of its kind ever seen here.

Miss Parry has taxed unto herself many honors. She has declined the services of a press agent because, as she said, "I don't believe there's the stuff from which I want to know what people really think about me. Then I know whether I am good or bad."

"I love to do work like Mrs. Fiske or Ada Nazimova," she said this week. "I want to be a Bernhardt myself and going to give up working until I am a Bernhardt. I am willing to sacrifice everything to become successful as an actress."

Anty Drudge Explains Why.

Mrs. Don'tcare—"Yes, but soap is soap, and it doesn't matter which we use."

Anty Drudge—"Yes, and medicine is medicine, but it does matter which kind you take. And it is the same way with soap. Some will do the work and some won't. I know from experience that Fels-Naptha is the only kind of soap that will wash things clean in cold or lukewarm water. It isn't just soap; it is a different and easier way of washing."

"Soap is soap" said a woman. Her only idea of soap was something to mix with hot water in order to make a steaming suds. She thought it didn't matter which kind she used—and it didn't.

But if she had used Fels-Naptha in the way it should be used, in cold or lukewarm water, she would have learned that Fels-Naptha is not only a soap but a different way of washing.

A sewing machine is of no use to a woman who doesn't know how to use it. Neither is any other labor-saving device.

Before you use a cake of Fels-Naptha, then, read carefully the directions printed on the back of the red and green wrapper. The directions will tell you how to make Fels-Naptha do the hardest part of your washing, without hot fires, without steaming suds, without boiling or back-breaking hard labor. It will save your clothes, save time, save fuel, save your health and the clothes will be cleaner and whiter than ever before.

But not unless you use it the Fels-Naptha way. Look for the red and green wrapper.

What will the Doves do to the Champion Cubs today after beating the Pirates three out of four? That's an interesting question after the last series, which was one of the surprises of the season, and it's never too late for more of the same.

The Cubs making a runaway race for the pennant are just as liable to bumpo as the Pirates, and if the Doves continue to put up the same article of diamond stuff, the Cubs will receive a few shocks which will keep them guessing.

It looks like a one-sided argument with the leaders and the lowly Doves battling for the gate receipts, but it was the same situation when the Pirates were here, and as a result of the contests the status of the teams may have been got twisted.

Unless the Doves fall down badly, they can't do worse than break even with the Cubs if they play anything like the games they did against the Pirates, and it's hardly probable that they will go to pieces at the present stage.

Gus Dorner will greet the Cubs, and if he pitches as good a game as he did against the Pirates he ought to get first money, no matter who the Cubs present.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

More rejoicing for the Doves. It's too bad the Pirates don't come again this season.

Vic Willis was certainly good to his old team, holding four passes in three innings.

Five hits were reaped off Willis while he lasted in the box but some were of the scratchy order.

Brain was there with his long bit. It was a two-bagger this time.

Johnny Bates got in the game in the fourth at Bridwell was filling out of shape.

His first effort was a clip to right that Jackson got under for three bases.

The next time he planked one over Leach's head which netted three bags on Baisey's limp.

Wagner was not heard from till he was put out of the game. He couldn't hit, so he tried him. Hallman who came into the game when Honus went out was walked twice by Young.

Pitching the last two innings was a touch job for Young as the box was a regular quagmire.

Those fast double plays by Beaumont and Ritchey rather took the starch out of the Pittsburgers. In both cases runners were touched on the line.

Randall came into the limelight in the fourth when he took Gibson's long fly to right error on the ball and run and scored a run.

Tenney distinguished himself in the third when he received a hot ground shot off Wagner and beat him a mile to the bag.

Tenney also got in a nifty two runs as Leach and Clarke were retired.

Dorner pitched a game which was one of the highest after the game. He certainly appreciates all the hope did in wiping up the Pittsburg crowd.

WRIGHT AND LITTLE DEFAULT

NEWPORT, Aug. 22.—Defaults on the part of Beals C. Wright, the 1905 national tennis champion, and Richmond D. Little, also of International fame as a player, robbed the all-comers' tournament here of two of the stars of greatest magnitude in the tennis firmament, and added reversals when Karl H. Behr went down to defeat before a comparatively unknown exponent of the game from Jersey, C. H. Palmer.

BIG GAME AT EVERETT.

New Everett and Everett will clash in the second game of the series of three for a purse of $50 and the championship of the city Saturday at Glenn County City Park. Manager Cox has made sure of his box twirling for Roslindale, while New Everett, with Storr on the receiving end, will allay and Gilmore will perform for Everett.

GOLF AT ESSEX COUNTY CLUB.

Over 100 of the leading amateur golfers of the district will compete in the thirty-six hole qualifying round of the three days' open tournament at the Essex County Club to-day. This will be the first tournament of any importance in the northeastern section the same club in the early part of July.

HIGHBALL WINNING SECOND HEAT OF RICH MASSACHUSETTS STAKE; AFTER THE RACE, AND HIS DRIVER, ED GEERS "TANNY'S" PITCHING DAYS OVER

JOE GANS'S TIP CAUSED BAT'S DOWNFALL

BY TAD.

Joe Gans, the lightweight champion of the world, not only threw the books into Battling Nelson, but twisted them, too.

Some time ago this Gans-person met the Dane at Goldfield and won, after a fight lasting forty-two rounds. Those at the ringside declare that no man ever took the licking the Dane did, and predicted a quick finish for his career in the ring.

Billy Nolan, who managed the Dane, incurred the displeasure of Mr. Gans during the signing of articles, and got in bad. In fact, Mr. Nolan seemed to be in bad all over. Like Rockefeller, he was "misunderstood." No one seemed to see things the way Bill did, and the result was that thousands upon thousands of sports wanted to see the Dane licked to get even on Nolan.

Mr. Gans, of Baltimore, was one of these, and although he had a greater grudge than any bet $12,000 on Nelson against Britt, hoping that he'd lose.

He sat in Britt's corner the night of the fight, and for the first seven rounds thought he saw his own money and much more coming back. After the seventh Britt took a lead, and Gans, forgetting he bet, got up in his seat and howled for the local man. He advised Britt from his ring seat, and also when Britt, knowing him to one knew Nelson better than Gans did, dashed around so that most of the battle was fought right under the nose of the colored champion. Round after round he warned Britt, tipping him on punches and actually fought the battle for him. If ever a man got revenge on another Gans did that night, and the result of the battle showed it. Nelson was defeated a mile. Nolan got the drawing card, and poor Nelson, the innocent party, got all the wallops.

Unk Russell, who trained out West with Bill Squires when that great mug was pestering Jim Burns, tells some queer things about the kangaroo demon.

This mug Squires, piped Unk, "thought more of blocking his knees than he did of his jaw. He had big long arms, you know, and kept them 'way down low.

"When he fought in close with a fellow he refused with his long left, pulled it way down by his knees, and then let it fly. He had both of them down like a fellow playing handball all the time, and I thought to myself he'll get his brains knocked out the first time he gets near a clever fellow. Burns did it, and I'm surprised that Squires is still alive.

"Could he hit? Oh, sure. He took the drop from like Tommy myself and tried to knock us out every day. He hit Thomas on the jaw and nearly broke it one day, and then he asked me to box him. Say, what I never could do was to hit him. I walloped me on the front teeth and I couldn't make a head feint off. If anyone would teach him how to block his jaw he might amount to something some day, because he's a husky brute and a slugger."

BOXING NOTES.

Sailor Burke didn't like the idea of Jack Johnson signing to win Kid Carter before the Reading Athletic Club, so Augie Ziegler, the Reading boxing promoter, got busy and Jack Johnson made them a fast set of bluffers. Burke went to Reading and Johnson didn't show up. Burke is now outside yell "Fire," and then walloped Johnson with a chair when the crowd left.

Tom Sharkey is taking no chances with the crooks since his Summer home at Coney Island was robbed and set on fire. He has a pair of pistols, silverplated and pearl handled, that probably was stolen. The next week Tom has his pockets sewed up and carries a couple of bricks. These are to throw at pieces on the walls, and if the crooks want to get them now they will have to take the walls with them.

* * *

The reason that Jimmy Coffroth withdrew his bid for the Britt-Nelson match, which he had practically closed between himself and Jack Gleason, for the match, whereby the latter will have the privilege of selling the Colma Club out before letting it any number with the show and in return will have the privilege of promoting, managing and handling them throughout the United States and Canada, is because Coffroth has been informed that he will be interfered in towards California. He thinks if they are coming East to meet Nelson, the chance Britt should win, he may make just as much money and if not will be sure of his handling the fight.

Sailor Burke and his trainer, Joe Mulvehill, left for Stratford yesterday, where he will train for his fight with Jack Johnson. Billy Gibson's match with Harry Ferns will join Burke later in the week to help Sailor along. In this Redondo is a big better fellow and will be a valuable man around the camps.

* * *

Jem Mace, who was a star thirty-five years ago, is a shoe clerk, too, was started a very bad day when not quite in condition, and after fairly walking off with a beat in 2:07½, and the next in a little slower time, was effected by the heat and lost the race. This has laid her up since, and it would offend him to see Mike Heaney, the Canadian heavyweight. Burns intends to take a theatrical part out on the road, and will open in Boston, which is booked up for twelve weeks.

* * *

Jack Britt, one of Canada's best weight fighters, declared he would like to get a crack at either Tommy Burns or Jack Johnson. Britt has been doing light training for the past two months, as he really good fighting form.

* * *

Eddie Tuohy, the Northwestern Chicago lightweight, who has been matched to box Jack Britt, writes to local sports that Harry Gilbert, right of Milwaukee, on Labor Day, September 2. Tuohy will be classified the heavy weight, but will weigh in at 135 ringside. Both are fast strappers and a knockout will surely take place when they meet.

Norfolk Stake, Worth $6,000, Grand Circuit Feature

THREE BIG RACES AT READVILLE

TODAY'S SELECTIONS.

The Ponkapoag, Trotting—Watson, Ill-Flora, Early Alice.

The Norfolk, Pacing—Allenwood, John A., Kruger.

At Lynn, Trotting—Farley, Lotta, Charley Belden.

By Edward E. Cogswell.

Three exciting good races are programmed for the Grand Circuit meeting at Readville to-day, the feature one being the Norfolk, for pacers eligible to the 2:06 class last April, and thirteen have declared their intention of taking the word, six thousand dollars is the value of the stake.

Argot Boy holds the record for the event as 2:01¼, made last season, and with the weather and track at the best, there is a more than even chance that a new mark will be posted to the credit of the winner.

"Allenwood," the Michigan entry, last week gained a record at Poughkeepsie of 2:01¾, and it is a known fact that the Readville course is fully a second faster than the New York one.

While the chestnut stallion holds the fastest record of any starter, yet several have demonstrated with good luck they are capable of going right in 2:04 or better.

Kruger, John A., Aileen Wilson and Wilson Addington can be counted to carry the battle to one another, and the Allenwood entry, fast and furious from the line the word is given till they have circled the route. In every way the race looks like the best that has started during the meeting.

Watson Picked to Win.

In the Ponkapoag stake the pick will naturally be Watson, the first trotter in lower the colors of Sonoma Girl in the Grand Circuit. He has a world of speed, can go away from the wire like a locomotive under full headway, and the one that catches him will have his work cut out for all the route.

Ill-Flora, the veteran in the days of Rowe, Wedgewood, etc., will sit behind Fl-Flora, and when he goes from home with one it is dollars to peanut chucks that he has faith in getting a nice slice of the money.

Early Alice will be interested in seeing the great Western product that we have heard wonderful stories about the past season and early part of this, Early Alice. This mare last year took the world in seventeen races, winning thirteen, and was contested the entire season.

Unfortunately, at Terre Haute, a month ago, she was taken sick, was started a very bad day when not quite in condition, and after fairly walking off with a heat in 2:07½, and the next in a little slower time, was effected by the heat and lost the race. This has laid her up since, and it would offend him to see Mike Heaney, the Canadian heavyweight. Burns intends to take a theatrical part out on the road, and will open in Boston, which is booked up for twelve weeks.

Lotta's Other Star.

Lotta, the $10,000 purchase of Lotta Crabtree at the Baltimore Spring meeting, and which has performed so creditable in the circuit, having won all except a single race from Detroit down; Charley Belden, one of the kings of the Western Circuit last season; Tuxie, the idol of New York City horsemen; Turley, Geers's reliable of a couple of campaigns; Margaret O., that Bob Daly has been getting his shoes with, and not to mention our own entry from Boston, Mark Mark, the afternoon in the Grand Circuit of 1906, are the ones that will try for the cash and honors in the 2:06 event.

Surely it must be a great day's racing.

GRAND CIRCUIT BRIEFS.

It was the fourth meeting between Highball and Sonoma Girl, and honors stand even, each having getting his victories at Lakewood, Poughkeepsie, Terre Haute, Libertyville and Detroit.

McHenry tried the reversing knee hooks, etc., to no mare in her warming up mile, but she behaved so badly that when it came to the race he started her zigged as previously this season.

Highball was the lamest horse that has won the Massachusetts to date. He limped painfully jogging back to the score in every heat.

Great racing, big attendance, and the rain fortunately held off till the program was completed.

Dick Wilson, Roslyville, Ind., will start Aileen Wilson today in the Norfolk stake. Speaking to a group of horsemen about the mare he related, how, when she was a weanling, Orvil Horton bought out his partner's half in the little mare for $17.50, and she has been one of the winners in the Grand Circuit ever since.

"Long Shot" Cox has $500 with Jack Leonnb that Andrew Boy would not win the first heat of the free-for-all pace, and, of course, was in right as it proved.

Cox, however, ran against a snag when he bet Bert Forster a fifty note. He he owned a pony that could out-run the field, but pocketed when the race was decided the latter reaped the coin, his pony running the half mile in 59½ and the mile in 2:01.

The meeting this year is $2,000 ahead up to last night of the entire meet last season in gate money taken in, which leaves to-day and to-morrow to bring the receipts that more to the good.

DETROIT, Aug. 22.—"I don't believe that I will pitch again this year. I'm afraid that my days in the box may be over for the rest of my life. I'm just hoping, though I fear it's a forlorn hope at that."

So spoke Jesse Tannehill, the famous southpaw pitcher of the Boston American League club, here to-day to a friend who was condoning with him on his absence from the game. That Tannehill is taking an awful gloomy view of his arm is a relief of his fellow players. That he is now in serious shape, however, remains to be denied.

The osteopath who is treating Tannehill in Detroit was insisted that the pitcher was all sore arm no more this year, and the fact that Jesse will remain here after the departure of his team indicates that he has faith in the local medical man. He is sat in uniform every day at the ball park, but it is noticed that he never does any throwing with his salary wing. What light work he does is confined to catching with a catcher's mitt on his left hand. What little throwing he finds necessary is done with his right.

"I don't believe that Tannehill's discouragement is well founded," says Manager McGuire. "He's in good shape, I know, but I fully expect that he will be ready to pitch more than one game of ball before the close of the season. He has the blues just now; that's all."

But Jesse shakes his head at that. "I'm afraid I'm through," he repeats sadly.

But one game to-day on the trip for the Tigers and the Pirates to-day, as President Ban Johnson, of the American League, has ruled in favor of Boston against Washington in their dispute and McGuire's team will accordingly return from Cleveland to play off their postponed game here before the scheduled outgoing of the pennipeer on Sunday.

Will Bill Bailey, for Detroit, shut out Kroh for Boston are the advance selections for pitching duty. The Tigers are still in their position of yesterday—second place—the league lead in case Boston and Philadelphia are defeated.

WHY ESPERANTO?

If We Must Learn ONE UNIVERSAL Language, Why Not Take A LIVE ONE?

Copyright, 1907, by American Journal-Examiner

Much tiresome talk about the new language, "Esperanto," which seems to have replaced the dead and gone "Volapuk," which WAS to be the language of the world.

The effort to MANUFACTURE a language that everybody can learn, and that all men can speak, is about as foolish as it would be to manufacture mechanically a new BABY while there are so many perfectly good babies running around.

Suppose that all the people of the world agreed that they needed to employ in some particular way some particular baby. Wouldn't it be sensible to take one of the LIVE ones, and give that little thing a chance, INSTEAD OF TRYING FOOLISHLY TO CONSTRUCT A NEW BABY OUT OF ODDS AND ENDS?

A language is just as much a LIVING thing as a human being. It is just as much a matter of growth, evolution, development, as any child.

A language grows, as a tree grows. The language of man began with a few rough sounds, gruntings, whistlings, at first indicating probably fear, warning and anger. This slight beginning of language has GROWN into the various beautiful languages of the world, with their wondrous power of thought expression, just as the acorns have spread and developed into the beautiful oaks that form the forests.

Each language is a record of a race of men. Each language has struggled for existence through the past as the races of men have struggled.

Each word has seen its changes, its varied meanings, every word has its history, and every word is beautiful in its power of condensed expression.

To try to manufacture a language out of odds and ends in a so-called "scientific way" is nonsense. You may as well take a lot of excelsior and shavings and bits of old paper and try to make a forest.

If it is desirable that all human beings should be able to speak one language—and it is—let them all learn to speak some ONE other living language in addition to their own.

This cannot be arranged by convention or agreement, of course. The languages, like men and beasts, will go on fighting for supremacy in the future, as they have in the past, until at last one of them shall be the universal language of the human race, having within itself the beauties and power of all the conquered languages.

As it is, the various languages to-day contain traces of others, of old languages that have long ceased to exist in their primitive forms.

In the libraries, on the old monuments we dig up remnants of past thoughts expressed in words, just as in the geological strata we dig out the fossils of past animal life expressed in bones.

Language is A LIVING THING. It is a changing thing, a growing thing. At present the English language dominates on this earth, as regards the number of educated men using it. We do not suggest that it will be, or should be, the language finally adopted by humanity.

The German language has beauties of expression that are unknown to English speaking people. The French language, in its smoothness, its precision, its capacity for clear, unmistakable statement of fact, has made itself the language of diplomacy.

It was for long years the almost universal language of highest civilization. The Spanish language is beautiful and powerful. Some of the great monuments of human thought are preserved in it. So also of the Italian, inheritor of the grace and beauty of the Latin tongue.

We advise no reader to waste his time on "Esperanto," or any other Frankenstein idea in the way of language. Living things cannot be BUILT—they must grow.

If you have the time to spare, study one of the languages that are alive. Study these in preference to the ancient languages that lived formerly. Latin and Greek are beautiful, but for the average man it is better to know two living languages, if he can know ONLY two.

If you can know only ONE, however, do not worry about that. TRY TO KNOW THAT ONE LANGUAGE AS WELL AS YOU CAN.

Homer knew only one language—but he knew it thoroughly. Dante knew only Italian, Shakespeare knew only English. Moliere spoke only French.

If you can conquer your OWN language thoroughly, if you can make it express easily and clearly the thought in your mind, you will have done a good deal.

Ice Preserves Disease Germs

Watch Your Refrigerators. Avoid Sickness

Copyright, 1907, by American Journal-Examiner

Heat kills the germs of disease. COLD DOES NOT.

The germ of typhoid may be frozen in a pond this Winter. You may drink the melted ice from that pond next Winter or the Winter after, and die of the typhoid locked up in the ice.

There are thousands of cases of typhoid from the careless use of ice. Children skating in the Winter time take a piece of ice from a stagnant pond or lake and eat it, when they would not dream of drinking the dirty water in Summer. Many have an idea that ice is in some way a purifying, disease-destroying agent.

IN NINE HOUSES OUT OF TEN, PERHAPS, THE DIRTIEST THING IN THE HOUSE IS THE REFRIGERATOR.

Fish, meat, foods of all kinds are put in these refrigerators. Disease germs are introduced in them; THEY ARE NOT CLEANED OFTEN OR THOROUGHLY ENOUGH.

Dr. J. White, in Good Housekeeping, writes an article of excellent useful warning to housekeepers, on the care and the cleaning of the refrigerator. Every compartment in a refrigerator should be cleaned thoroughly at least twice a week. "All removable parts should be taken out for greater ease in cleaning. All parts should be washed with good soap and hot water, with cloth or brush, then thoroughly scalded, after which it is well to go over the lining with some chloride solution, a caustic cleaning solution, or a strong solution of borax and water."

In addition to this, the ice, when it comes in, should be rinsed with clean water.

Milk should be kept away from other things as far as possible, in glass pitchers or jars, well covered up. The same is true of butter. Milk taken into the system pure has the marvellous faculty of taking out disease germs with it; it is of great value in ridding the system of poison. But milk, like butter, absorbs all impurities very easily.

Watch your refrigerator; keep it clean.

That advice isn't quite as high-sounding and impressive as advice about the tariff. But it may save your life or your children's, yes—and a political editorial couldn't do th[at].

Weary Heroes

By Wex Jones.

"LOOK-A-HERE," said Jim Bludso, in tones of great exasperation, "I'm not a-goin' to hold the nose of this boat against the bank much longer. If you galoots don't look lively you'll burn to death for all of me."

The deck of the Prairie Bell was crowded with heroes and heroines of all descriptions.

"Bludso's gettin' pretty swelled up," muttered a girl togged up in Texas cowboy style, "I'd like to see him on a bronco."

"That's right, Lasca," remarked a stalwart fellow from whose scanty clothing ran streams of muddy water. "If the United Society of Electrified Heroes picks out this old Prairie Bell for its meeting, I don't see why Bludso should try to boss it. I held the bridge long before America was discovered and I swam the Tiber, when nothing but whitefish ever swam in these waters."

"Brave, Horatius; that's pro bono publico and dandy. I'm tired of always carrying that message through the night, and as sure as my name's Paul Revere I'm going to quit. They're going to put me in an electric phonograph now, and I'll be dashing through the dark at all hours of the day and night. I'll be electrocuted as well as electioned."

"Pooh!" exclaimed a soldierly looking hero who stood near.

"My ride was enough," continued Revere, "without keeping me going nowadays."

"Pooh!" ejaculated the soldierly hero.

"What maverick's that?" asked Lasca.

"That's Sheridan; had a bit of a ride himself," answered Horatius.

"Hey there!" yelled Bludso, "why don't they strike the bell up there; it's 12 o'clock."

"Can't do it," answered Maud Muller; "there's a girl hanging on to it like a strap hanger and shouting 'Curfew shall not ring to-night.'"

"Well, as we've all decided to cut out work after this and remain quiet in shadowland we'd better get ashore," said Sheridan. "No more we'll be electrocuted. Come on there," he added, lifting Barbara Frietchie to the gang plank.

With a rush Lasca was ashore, Horatius holding the plank. Maud Muller slowly followed, her mind evidently on the judge.

"Wake up that there guy dying on the deck," directed Bludso. "Tell him you'll take him back to Bingen, fair Bingen on the Rhine—that'll rouse him."

At last all were ashore, and Bludso followed. Heroes and heroines, were about to fade away, when some one shouted, "There's that dashed kid on the burning deck," and sure enough there was Casabianca.

"Come on," they cried.

But—

But Casabianca wouldn't move, and, of course, that broke up the society. So if you're not careful you may still bump up against an "entertainment," where the poor, overworked fragments of the U. S. E. H. are tortured, with appropriate gestures.

The Great Feminine Forearm Exhibition!

By Professor Frank Parsons

WHAT a splendid exhibit of arms the women are making this year!

It is true that most of them are not beautiful arms—they curve in too much on the thumb side about half way between elbow and wrist in most cases, and many are like a badly worn car wheel—flat on one side.

But the way to make arms more beautiful is to show them; then the women will cultivate them more carefully and the laws of selection will operate more forcefully upon that portion of the human anatomy.

The most interesting thing about the exhibit, however, is the proof it gives of the docile obedience of a world full of women to the decrees of the Emperor or Empress of fashion.

Neither the Emperor William, nor King Edward, nor the Czar, nor President Roosevelt, nor the Pope, nor all five combined, could compel the women to wear short sleeves. Very many of them would scornfully refuse to obey the orders of these comparatively feeble potentates.

But some man or woman, perhaps at Worth's or Paquin's in Paris, or in the lead of fashion in Newport or New York, has made short sleeves young. Woman on the continent wear short sleeves, for a few weeks or months, without any ukase or decree, but simply by the force of imitation, the sheep principle of follow-your-leader.

I'm wondering what would happen if the leaders of fashion were to adopt the fashion of wading, say at the mid-thigh, with glove-fitting stockings from there to the toe.

They come pretty close to it at the seashore sometimes, and go beyond it on the vaudeville stage—Revelations being the favorite portion of the Scriptures because of those theatres as well as at the seashore.

But whether or no the women would quietly submit to a drawing-room fashion of that sort I do not know. Perhaps those who had beautiful underpinning would obey the mandate of the fashion makers in such a case, and the rest would go on strike.

Who Wants Another Term?

By James J. Montague

WHO was it forced those piteous groans the Oil Trust issued? Hey?
Who fined them thirty million bones they don't intend to pay?
Who sent that fleet to fight the Japs, and some days later, when
Sweet peace seemed just as well, perhaps, he called it home again?
Who said two terms were quite enough? Who said it good and firm?
Who never thought or dreamed of bluff? Who wants another term?

Oh! Root has gone to Wall Street just
To put alarm to flight,
And reassure a certain trust
That things will be all right.
The campaign's coming pretty soon,
And Wall Street must come through.
"Who wants another term?" you croon,
And echo answers, "WHO?"

WHO was it said that greed and graft must speedily be downed,
And had his features photographed to show the way he frowned?
Who was it pitched ten tons of hay with strenuous success,
And took the prints they took that day around the rural press?
Who is it has the railroad men right where they cannot squirm,
But let's them wriggle now and then? Who wants another term?

Taft's boating it across the sea,
And while he's far away,
If he's too popular, he'll be Instructed briefly, "Stay!"
No other man to fit the job
Appears upon the globe.
"Who wants another term?" you sob,
And echo answers, "LOEB!"

Little Editorials from the People

THE KITTEN AND THE MILK CAN

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Your editorial in the BOSTON AMERICAN about the dusty kitten is one of the best articles I have yet read. You certainly hit the nail on the head when you say that "This earth is our milk can."

The hope for the future lies in the fact that an increasingly large number of people are realizing that in this fight that is being waged against monopoly, the greatest of all monopoly is the monopoly of the natural resources of the world. Your editorial should be in the hands of every voter in the United States.

ALFRED J. BOULTON.
